Board members won't negotiate teacher contract

By Paul Guggina
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — No Board of Education members want to negotiate with the teachers union this summer.

Two board members must be on the negotiating team (along with five administrators) that is scheduled to begin contract talks with teachers this month.

But, with less than two weeks remaining before the teachers' current three-year contract expires, no board member has agreed to be a negotiator.

The matter was brought up at Tuesday's school board meeting, but no action was taken.

Granite City Federation of Teachers Local 743 plans to file a grievance alleging the board violated the contract.

The union also plans to file an unfair-labor-practice complaint with the Illinois Labor Relations Board, union president Shirley Stoll said.

"I am astounded that the board hasn't named board members to the negotiating team," Stoll said.

The union wrote to the board in June and July requesting action, Stoll said. "We have been waiting since that time for the board to name two members so we could have a contract before the opening of school," she said.

The contract expires Aug. 14. The school term begins Aug. 24.

Asked if there was a possibility that teachers would strike if a full negotiating team was not in place by then, Stoll responded, "That is a decision that has to be voted on by the members."

The union plans to meet Aug. 17.

At Tuesday's school board meeting, board member Ranney Rich said he would volunteer to be on the negotiating team only if Board President Monroe Worthen would volunteer, but Worthen declined.

Worthen, who was a chief negotiator in past collective bargaining, said that during the last two negotiations Mack Johnson, now a board member, interfered in the negotiations.

"The first time it happened, I said if it happened again that was it," Worthen said. "Then it happened again last year."

Worthen said that Johnson "broke the rules" in 1986 by giving a reporter false information about negotiations, and

Chlorine leak hits Wilson Pool

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — A chlorine leak Wednesday afternoon at the Wilson Park Pool sent seven pool employees scurrying to safety and the pool's assistant manager to the hospital.

Chlorine is a heavier-than-air gas that can cause lung damage when inhaled. It is widely used in extremely diluted form to purify the water in swimming pools.

Assistant Manager Kimberly Goes, 22, was taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center for precautionary examination. The pool was due to open in 15 minutes, and children were already arriving when Goes discovered the leak at about 12:45 p.m.

Goes, of 2036 Hildebrand Ave., Cloverleaf Addition, was examined and released by the Industrial Medicine Department at the hospital. She was out running errands when a call was made to her home shortly after 4 p.m., but her mother said she showed no ill effects.

Goes discovered the leak after completing a routine flushing procedure. While waiting for X-rays at the hospital, she explained that she had seen a loose hose in the pump room and immediately "slammed the door" and called the Wilson Park office. The park office staff ordered the pool evacuated and called the fire department.

Park Director Steve Kessel said pool personnel are instructed to call the park office immediately.

DANGER AVERTED: Acting Captain Ray Schultz, Granite City Fire Department, takes off his air mask as he exits the Wilson Park pool house after checking the chlorine purification system. At right is shift commander Skip Marcum, who, with Schultz and firefighter David Jenkins, entered the pool house and reconnected hoses to the chlorine system, which had been found leaking by Kimberly Goes, assistant manager of the pool. She was taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center for precautionary examination, but was later released. The leak was found prior to the 1 p.m. opening of the pool.

Street department must re-landscape, but ...

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Landscaping on easements following sewer repair will be limited to replacing the dirt and seeding grass, but landscaping on private property will be based on prior negotiation by the street superintendent.

The City Council passed a resolution establishing that policy

9-2, with one abstention, Tuesday.

Landscaping became the debate topic during a vote to pay the city's July bills.

Second Ward Alderman Jim Miller questioned bills from Ed & Beth Greenhouse for $940 and $975.

"How many square feet are we talking about?" he asked Street Superintendent Mac Warfield. "A pretty good bite," Warfield said. "I've spent $4,500 on a backyard before."

Warfield said he was glad the subject came up because he wanted the aldermen to make a decision about how much responsibility the city is going to take for repair and replacement.

Miller said that if $1,800 was a typical month that he doubted the city could afford it.

Seventh Ward Alderman Jeff Worthen said landscaping was part of sewer repair if it was done by a contractor hired to do it and that, if the street department did the work, it should be doing the same thing.

"I also think this council four, five, six months ago had brought to its attention that (street department) crews are not qualified and don't have the experience to do landscaping. So it voted to allow the street superintendent to put out contracts."

Worthen said that when it came to structures in easements, the city was not responsible, but that the easement needed to be clearly defined.

Warfield said that a survey clearly showed that a shed in (See SEWERS, Page 12A)

Zoning board sent mobile home issue

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Mobile homes are not always desirable but "first class citizens" should be allowed to put them in, 1st Ward Alderman Cassner Skubish told the City Council on Tuesday.

"Who is to be the judge?" 7th Ward Alderman Jeff Worthen asked. "I don't think I want to." Skubish said the city inspector and the City Council should look at the situation and decide if the addition of a mobile home would be an asset to a neighborhood.

Skubish said he had a request from a citizen who wanted to bring his son's mobile home from Texas and place it on a lot behind his house.

"I've seen pictures and it really looks nice," he said. Skubish said it would help, not hinder the area.

"We spent about nine months solving this and it still comes up over and over," Worthen said.

Principal assignments set

By Paul Guggina
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Four District 9 elementary schools have new principals.

Newly hired Gail Elble, a former high school guidance counselor in Wood River, is the new principal of Frather School, the district's largest elementary school. She replaces Michael Loftus, who left the district to accept a similar position in Troy.

Elble's assignment was one of four made at Tuesday's Board of Education meeting.

Kathleen McBride, formerly a teacher in St. Louis County, was assigned to Wilson School.

Former Wilson principal Ellen Voyles was assigned to Niedringhaus, and Joan Harris was reassigned from Niedringhaus to Mitchell.

Elble and Elshah, came to Granite City on Monday to arrest an Elshah fugitive, but first he had to borrow a pair of handcuffs from an Alton motorcycle cop. After a successful arrest and transport, Keene said he did not have to use the handcuffs.

"What we tried to do was fit the strengths of an individual to the needs of given facilities," said Superintendent G.W. Walmsley, who recommended the assignments.

He said that even though Elble has never been a principal, she would be appropriate at the 700-pupil school because of her experience as a guidance counselor and other skills.

"I think she has many attributes she can bring to Frather," Walmsley said. "She is highly organized, and she showed a lot of innovative thinking with regard to student programs."

SEMC blood drive to take place Aug. 11

"Take an hour out of your day, cool off and save four lives by donating blood," St. Elizabeth Medical Center blood drive chairman Ruth Ann Gabriel said today. SEMC will host a community blood drive on Thursday, Aug. 11, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the air-conditioned Ketteler gym.

Donors must be at least 17 years old, in good health and weigh more than 105 pounds.

"With summer here, the demand for blood becomes even more critical. We hope to collect at least 100 units of blood," Gabriel said. "Whole blood can be separated into components to treat specific medical conditions.

That way, several patients can benefit from a single donated unit."

Benefactors of blood donations range from accident victims to hemophiliacs, to patients undergoing chemotherapy, elective surgery or organ transplants.

"Every 10 seconds, someone somewhere needs blood."

Venice may buy new police cars

By Marva Collins
Correspondent

VENICE City Council members are planning to purchase two new police cars and put new tires on the department's other vehicles.

The plan depends upon the availability of funds. No action was taken on the purchase pending a meeting with the Finance Committee.

In other action, the council instructed Street Superintendent Clarence Bradley to post "no parking" signs on both sides of Weaver Street to Jackson Street and to the alley.

The Rev. Harold Wilson, president of the Madison-Venice Branch of the NAACP (National Association for the Advancement of Colored people), asked the council to assist with a signature petition drive to make Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday in January a paid holiday in Madison County.

Wilson said that signatures of 15,000 Madison County registered voters are needed to put this issue on the Nov. 8 election ballot and let the people decide.

Wilson added that the Alton and Edwardsville NAACP chapters are also helping.

SEMC announces program to help keep women healthy

To help women reach their goals by helping them to stay healthy, St. Elizabeth Medical Center is offering a new program called Health Options for Women (HOW).

"SEMC has always offered programs for women of all ages. However, they haven't been pulled together under one program. Now, we are coordinating our resources and adding some new features to make it easier for a woman to become aware of the options that are available to maintain her health and well-being," said Charlotte Swanson, Occupational Health Service manager.

The program will consist of various classes and sessions covering different topics of interest to women. The first offerings seek to reflect the range of interests today's woman has.

"Basic Self Defense for Women" — This class is designed to increase a self-confidence and awareness by learning defensive skills. Exercises designed to increase flexibility are also featured. The class will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays, Aug. 23 to Oct. 15, from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m., in the Wellness Center. The cost is $24.

"Stork Exercise Club" — These easy-to-perform exercises are suited for women in all stages of pregnancy, including postpartum. They will assist in experiencing improved muscle tone, less pregnancy-induced lower back pain, and increased energy levels. The class will also seek to make delivery easier and less painful and recovery faster, including regaining pre-pregnancy shape quicker. Classes will meet each Tuesday and Thursday, Aug. 23 to Oct. 15, from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. Participants are to bring a pillow and a blanket to each class. The cost is $24 and a physician's release is required.

"Osteoporosis and You" — This free community program, sponsored by the American Dairy Council, will help persons understand what osteoporosis is, how it develops, who is at risk, and how it can be prevented or slowed through diet and lifestyle changes. The class will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 21, at 7 p.m. in the Wellness classroom. Pre-registration is required.

"Self Breast Examination/Mammography Clinic" — The SEMC Radiology Department is sponsoring this free community program. An overview of mammography and self-examination techniques will be featured. Slides of actual mammographies will be shown and cancerous and non-cancerous diseases will be discussed. Self breast examinations will be taught. The program will be conducted by a registered radiologic technologist trained in mammography on Wednesday, Oct. 5, at 7 p.m. in the Wellness Center. Pre-registration is required.

"We're planning more sessions on different topics for later dates. It is time for SEMC to utilize the experienced personnel we have and offer programs to assist women in different areas of their lives," Swanson said. "The Wellness Center number is 798-3935."

diately if there is a leak.

Then, he said, "The first thing we do is call the fire department. We would rather be safe than sorry."

The loose hose "was supposed to connect the regulator valve and the injector valves in the chlorine purification system. Two, 100-pound tanks feed 50 pounds of chlorine a day into the pool.

The chlorine system had been down for repairs. It was fixed and reconnected Tuesday night, said Pool Manager Brett Bjorkman. Bjorkman said the leak resulted either from the hose being improperly connected or from the wrong sequence of tasks being followed in preparing the pool for opening.

During a procedure called "backwashing," all valves except one are shut down to enable dirty water to be flushed out of the system. If the chlorination pump is turned back on without opening the valves again, the pressure can blow the hose loose.

Kessel said no formal classes are conducted for pool personnel, but he said he personally explains correct pool operations to the manager and assistant manager. When contacted late Wednesday afternoon, Kessel, who had been in St. Louis when the leak happened, was on his way to the pool to review what had gone wrong.

Assistant Fire Chief Bob Bell said no city regulation requires the fire department to conduct safety examinations of the pool's chlorine system.

By coincidence, fire department personnel had watched a training film on chlorine leaks Wednesday morning.

Goes' mother, Mary, said her daughter was treated by an eye doctor earlier in the week in connection with an accident at the pool last weekend.

Joint Bible school to begin Monday

Defective device will be replaced

By Judy Fahys

P-R/J Washington bureau
WASHINGTON — The operator of four Car X Muffler Shops in the metropolitan St. Louis area, including Granite City, Bridgeton and two in Florissant, plans to avert $25,000 in federal Environmental Protection Agency fines by replacing substandard auto air cleaning devices with EPA-approved ones.

The agency announced $475,000 in fines July 28 against 43 facilities nationwide.

The car dealerships, muffler shops and repair stations are accused of 400 incidents of tampering with catalytic converters, devices that filter from automobile exhaust pollutants known to raise ozone to unhealthy levels.

"The activities of the facilities cited in these notices undermine our efforts to improve air quality," said Don Clay, the EPA's acting administrator for air and radiation.

The EPA proposed a penalty of $5,000 against the Car X shop at 3711 Nameoki Road in Granite City for five violations of tampering. EPA claims the Car X shops, and most of the others charged with violations, installed "two-way" converters on cars that require "three-way" converters.

The two-way converters reduce hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide discharges. Three-way converters also filter nitrogen oxide emissions.

The remaining violations involve companies that installed "after-market converters" on cars still under manufacturers' warranty, the EPA charged.

Car-X shops referred calls to Barbara Posner, vice president of communications for Temesco Automotive, Lincolnshire, Ill., parent company for the more than 130 franchises and company-owned stores in the Midwest.

Posner said St. Louis-area franchise owner Leon Corey bought the mufflers in 1986 from a distributor, trusting that the mufflers were EPA-approved. "He didn't know these were uncertified converters," she said.

When EPA inspectors visited the shop in February, they said, they noticed the two-way converters, which had been barred since January. Corey removed the converters from the shelves immediately, Posner said.

She added that Corey received a letter from the EPA on July 28 which proposes withdrawing the charges and the fines once the franchise owner replaces the 25 substandard mufflers his shops inadvertently installed. "He fully intends to do that," Posner said.

Factory-installed converters, designed to last for the car's life, sometimes need to be replaced if they are damaged or tampered with.

In an effort to control the amount of harmful automobile exhaust emissions, the EPA imposed regulations in 1986 to keep pollution from replacement exhaust systems at the same level as those of new cars.

Hydrocarbon, carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxide emissions contribute to high ozone levels on hot days. Health experts say excessive ozone harms the very young and very old, as well as those with respiratory problems.

Massive kill

ANNUAL LAKE PUMP-OUT: A portion of Horseshoe Lake, south of the causeway in the state park, was pumped out last week to allow the planting of millet for the fall duck season, resulting in thousands of fish being killed. The fish dot the lake bottom near the inlet of the large pump used to drain the lake area. This photo was taken by Brad O'Brien, who is planning a petition drive to stop the annual pumping.

Weatherized homes to get smoke detectors

The state has begun installing smoke detectors in homes weatherized under the Illinois Home Weatherization Assistance program (IHWA).

"Each year, thousands of people are injured or killed by fire in their homes," Gov. James Thompson said. "The National Fire Protection Association estimates that more than 90 percent of fire fatalities occur in homes that have no smoke detectors."

"Under the rules of the Department of Energy, weatherization funds could not be used for smoke detectors, so we have designed a program that allows us to use federal block grant funding from the Department of Health and Human Services to fill this important need."

Low-income families, senior citizens and the disabled should not be denied this protection. Illinois Home Weatherization Assistance is uniquely qualified to assist these families, making their homes both energy efficient and safe."

Jay R. Hedges, director of the Department of Commerce and Community Affairs (DCCA), which administers the program, said the new effort, which began July 15, requires that smoke detectors be installed in each occupied level of homes weatherized under both the basic and the mechanical systems components of the program.

"With this new program, we hope to install smoke detectors in as many as 6,000 homes during 1988, providing essential warning to their occupants in the event of fire," Hedges said.

Participating will be the Madison County Community Development Agency and the St. Clair County Intergovernmental Grants Department.

State Fire Marshal Thomas Bestudik said smoke inhalation is a major cause of death in residential fires.

"Smoke detectors do not prevent fires or suppress them, but working smoke detectors give occupants precious seconds to get out of burning areas and into fresh air," he said.

Hedges said the smoke detectors will be installed by the local weatherization agencies or their subcontractors and must meet all local code requirements.

IHWA assists low-income homeowners and renters, particularly senior citizens and the disabled, by installing insulation, set-back thermostats, storm windows and doors, caulking and weatherstripping, repairing or replacing furnaces and making other minor repairs to reduce heat loss and conserve energy.

The program not only provides energy assistance to low-income households, but also stimulates the economy by purchases of labor and materials.

Funding for the program is allocated by DCCA to community action agencies, units of local government and other community-based organizations, based on an index-of-need formula and demonstrated performance.

Aluminum recycling resuming

GRANITE CITY — Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Co., celebrating its 20th anniversary as the nation's leading consumer recycling firm, opened a new center here on the Crossroads Plaza Shopping Center lot, Nameoki and Pontoon roads, Aug. 3.

A Reynolds employee will be stationed at the back of a 40-foot company trailer to identify and weigh all-aluminum cans and miscellaneous aluminum and pay the public — individuals and groups — cash for their conservation efforts.

Business hours will be 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday.

Reynolds is returning to a site where it served area consumers for several years.

"We left the shopping center as well as a few other locations in the winter of 1984-85 at a low market time," said Ram C. Nair, area business manager for Reynolds.

"Today the market is better than ever. There are more cans and other miscellaneous aluminum available for the public to recycle. And more products are being made from aluminum. That means firms like our parent company, Reynolds Metals Co., need the recyclable metal as a source for new products," Nair said.

At the Granite City center, Reynolds will pay up to 52 cents per pound for all-aluminum beverage cans, and up to 30 cents per pound for aluminum castings and other miscellaneous household aluminum. The latter category includes aluminum cooking items, gutters, siding, storm door and window frames, lawn chair tubing, lawn mower housings, and certain automotive parts.

Cans need not be crushed but should be kept separate from other aluminum. Prices vary according to pounds recycled at one time, and are subject to change.

When Reynolds pioneered consumer aluminum recycling in 1968, it purchased one million pounds of aluminum from the public. Today, the firm exceeds that amount daily.

Last year, Reynolds paid recyclers more than $115 million for almost 300 million pounds of aluminum.

Reynolds also has centers in St. Louis, Cool Valley, Mo., and Belleville.

Booklet on educating children about AIDS

Educating children about AIDS poses special problems for parents, teachers, and other adults responsible for children.

Because AIDS is a sexual topic, it is not easy to talk about. Yet, authorities say it is important that all children, particularly teenagers, know the facts about the AIDS virus, how it is contracted, and what precautions they can take to avoid it.

"To help you help your children understand AIDS and its causes," the U.S. Department of Education says, it has a free booklet called "AIDS and the Education of Our Children: A Guide for Parents and Teachers."

The booklet explains how the AIDS virus is transmitted, discusses methods of protection, and gives tips on the best way to approach the subject with one's child. For a copy, persons may send their name and address to Dept. 5871, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

AIDS is caused by a virus that destroys the immune system — your defense against infection. People who develop AIDS lose their ability to fight off diseases and become vulnerable to life-threatening diseases and cancers.

Illnesses that wouldn't normally be serious can become life-threatening. In addition, the virus may attack the nervous system and cause brain damage. Symptoms of AIDS include fever, night sweats, diarrhea, weight loss, fatigue, swollen lymph glands, skin rashes, and neurologic disorders such as memory loss, partial paralysis, and loss of coordination.

The AIDS virus is transmitted through the exchange of infected body fluids. It can be present in blood, semen, and vaginal secretions, so the exchange of these fluids — whether it be through homosexual or heterosexual intercourse, or the sharing of intravenous needles — greatly increases the chances of passing the virus on.

Until recently, hemophiliacs and other recipients of blood transfusions were at substantial risk of getting AIDS, but blood donated in the U.S. is now screened by a test that can identify blood containing antibodies to the AIDS virus. So the chance of getting AIDS from a blood transfusion is now very small, it is asserted.

Right now there is no cure for AIDS. Nor is there any vaccine to protect people from it. The Education Department says the key fact young people need to know is this: They can do a lot to avoid contracting the disease. Most cases result from behavior they can avoid.

"Parents, schools, and communities need to educate children about AIDS. They should provide up-to-date information about what AIDS is and how it spreads. With all the media coverage given to AIDS, children may have misconceptions and fears about it. Adults need to calm the fears by discussing AIDS openly with children," a spokesman said.

AIDS and the Education of Our Children suggests guidelines to help parents approach the subject of AIDS with their children. The booklet also lists sources of information on AIDS and additional publications.

Rackiewicz chosen as United drive chairman

The Tri-Cities Area United Way has named Paul Rackiewicz as the general chairman of its 1988 fund drive. The announcement was made by Ben Johannpeter, UW president.

"I have been involved with the United Way for a number of years and I am amazed at the way it meets and serves the needs of the community through its various agencies and services. I am very pleased and proud to serve such a quality organization," Rackiewicz said.

Rackiewicz is the executive vice president and chief operating officer of St. Elizabeth Medical Center, Granite City.

He came to SEMC in 1972 after receiving an associate of arts degree from Niagara County Community College, N.Y., in 1965 and a bachelor of science degree in 1968 from the college in Brockport, N.Y.

He served in the U.S. Army in 1969-71. In 1973, he obtained a master's degree in hospital and health care administration from St. Louis University.

Rackiewicz and his wife, Dottie, who is from the St. Louis area, have three children, Ann, 12, Edward, 10, and Ellen, 4.

He is involved in many professional associations and community groups. He is a fellow of the

Paul Rackiewicz

American College of Health Care Executives; past president of Illinois Hospital Association Region 4; member of the board of directors of the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce; member of the Granite City Rotary Club; and a board member of the local United Way.

"It will be a big challenge to match the effort shown in last year's fund drive. This year, it is even more important that the United Way have a number of new services in the community that the United Way helps support," Rackiewicz said.

"The success in these drives comes from the continued effort of everyone involved. They are a crucial part in everything that we do."

Romans 8:37: "We are more than conquerors."

Jesus said: "I will build my church and the gates of hell will not prevail against it." He did not tell a lie. The church that Jesus ordained and established is on top today!

The Holy Spirit came to lead us and guide us into all truth. One of the greatest truths of all time is this: "whom the Son hath made free, he is free indeed. Free from sin, condemnation and Satan's bondage."

Remember, it is conquer not compromise. We must forsake sin or suffer its consequences. We cannot serve two masters.

Jesus is our Lord. It is He that we must serve to be more than conquerors.

Serve Him. Today.

BAC says its med grads find jobs

The job market for medical assistant graduates of Belleville Area College is good, and expected to get better.

"There are so many employers who call the college requesting job candidates that the college can't fill them all," coordinator Rose Hall said.

A recent cover story in U.S. News and World Report listed medical assistance as starting at $5.50 to $6.50 an hour plus benefits after 10 months of schooling.

BAC's program costs approximately $1,600 to complete, compared to about $4,000 for training offered by private schools in the metropolitan area, Hall said. Financial aid may be available depending upon the student's income.

The average age of students who enroll in the training program is 27 to 28 and they range from 18 to 60.

Hall said graduates are often sought for management positions in physicians' offices. The program provides training in an administrative or clinical position. There are options to complete a one-year certificate program or a two-year associate degree that involve more management training.

An alumni reunion has been established through the program. Graduates of the program are being contacted to provide current job information and academic needs.

FEET FIRST

FOOTLOOSE AND FANCY FREE

By Dr. Claude Hiles

Podiatrists have long contended that walking barefoot (at the beach, for example) is good for the feet. Many podiatrists tell parents that allowing a toddler to walk unshod at home helps in the foot's development process. A study of recreational joggers shows that the walking and jogging barefoot actually improves the structure of the arch. X-rays of barefooted runners' feet showed an actual rise in their arches. Feet clad in running shoes were too insulated from stimuli to show any arch improvement.

Exercise promotes proper foot circulation which is the key to good foot health. Ask your podiatrist what preventive measures you can take to help keep your feet in the best condition possible. My office offers professional foot care and in-office surgery for all members of the family at 1930 State St. Three assistants are on the staff to offer you the personalized attention you deserve! ## New laser surgery relieves leg pain

Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — George O'Dell got zapped with a laser a few weeks ago, and he is glad he did.

O'Dell, 66, of Madison, began having excruciating pain and cramps in his legs last year. He consulted his family doctor, who referred him to Dr. Jaro Mayda, a vascular surgeon on staff at St. Elizabeth Medical Center and Anderson Hospital in Maryville.

Vascular surgeons operate on the circulatory system of arteries and veins. Mayda traced O'Dell's pain to, essentially, clogged pipes. The clogging is caused by atherosclerosis, commonly known as "hardening of the arteries," in which a material called plaque builds up, eventually blocking blood flow.

Plaque, compounded of fatty acids, calcium and cholesterol, had accumulated in his femoral arteries, the main conduits for blood flowing into the legs.

Mayda used a brand-new surgical technique called "laser angioplasty" to unclog O'Dell's arteries and restore normal blood flow. A slender fiber-optic cable is threaded into the artery. A laser is used to vaporize the plaque blockage.

Although it's only been a month since O'Dell had the operation at Anderson Hospital, he is already able to walk twice as far as he could before the operation. Laser angioplasty is being called a revolution in the treatment of plaque clogging. Currently, the laser procedure is approved only for use below the waist, but the Food and Drug Administration is considering expanding its use to the neck, where the plaque clogs that cause strokes originate.

Mayda also said a dozen trial operations, all successful, have been performed on the coronary arteries of the heart.

Anderson is one of only three hospitals in the bi-state area at which the new surgery is being done. Dr. Mayda, who studied vascular surgery at the Cleveland Clinic, where the first coronary bypass operation was performed in 1954, has offices in the Trivier Medical Building, 2044 Madison Ave., across from St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

For many years, bypass surgery was the only treatment available for atherosclerosis. Said Mayda: "Either legs were bad enough to be bypassed or they weren't. There was no middle ground."

Bypasses are exactly what they sound like. Just as a highway bypass reroutes traffic to avoid a congested downtown, so does a surgical bypass reroute blood around a plaque blockage. Artificial arteries of Teflon or sections of a patient's own veins are attached to the clogged artery at points above and below the blockage.

But there are inherent problems with bypasses. "Graft thrombosis" — scar tissue at the point of the graft — serves as a convenient point for plaque to start building up again. And sometimes clots develop farther down the artery, necessitating additional grafts.

Mayda said half of all grafts above the knee and two thirds of all grafts below the knee fail within five years. "All the knee fail within five years. All the knee fail in the lower extremities fail eventually, because they're not really supposed to be there," he said.

Moreover, a graft is a major surgery. Atherosclerosis is largely a disease of the elderly, and many of the elderly are not suitable candidates for major surgery.

"Some have bad hearts and bad lungs which preclude bypass," Mayda said. "Such people have just had to suffer in the past."

About 10 years ago, doctors began prescribing exercise, smoking cessation and a combination of drugs, among them aspirin, to reduce the amount of plaque in the blood. This regimen, however, is seldom effective in cases where there is already blockage.

Another procedure for unclogging arteries, balloon angioplasty, is not completely effective, either. A balloon attached to thin surgical tubing is inserted into the artery and inflated to flatten the plaque blockage against the wall of the artery.

Sometimes this procedure dislodges the blockage and it lodges again farther down the artery. About a third of all balloon angioplasties fail within six months, Mayda said.

There are several advantages to laser angioplasty. It is safer, cheaper and more effective than bypasses or balloon angioplasty.

Laser angioplasty combines balloon catheterization with the use of a low-power laser. A thin fiber-optic catheter is connected to a laser generator and pushed into the artery until it makes contact with the clot.

When the laser is turned on, it heats a metal cap at the end of the catheter to 400 degrees Celsius. In a matter of seconds, the hot cap vaporizes the plaque, eliminating the possibility of the blockage's lodging farther along.

Through a fluoroscope, you can see the laser-it cable at work. It makes contact with the blockage, stops for two or three seconds, and continues on its way.

The surgeon works it back and forth, in essence like a plumber using a "snake" to clear a clogged drain. A balloon is then inserted and inflated to flatten against the arterial wall whatever plaque remains. There is believed to be very little risk involved. True, the laser sometimes burns through the arterial wall, but the artery seals itself almost immediately, with minimal hemorrhaging.

Mayda has performed 22 of the operations, and only two of them did not work, forcing him to resort to a graft bypass.

Some blockages have too much calcium in them. Calcium doesn't vaporize until 2,000 degrees Celsius, far too much heat to introduce into the body.

Mayda says laser angioplasty has revolutionized the treatment of atherosclerosis.

"I think the combination of it and balloon angioplasty will completely replace balloon angioplasty by itself," he said. "It is definitely an alternative to bypass surgery."

The entire procedure usually takes an hour to 90 minutes. A patient is in the hospital for two or three days, compared to seven to 10 days for bypass surgery. Moreover, the only incision in most cases is a tiny one in the groin where the laser cable is inserted, so there is no scarring as in bypass surgery.

A local anesthetic is used, so the patient is awake the whole time. Most patients have reported no pain or sensation of heat during the operation and minimal discomfort afterward.

The future of this procedure looks as bright, well, as bright as a laser, says Mayda.

"I think we're seeing the beginning of a new era. The second-generation lasers will be far superior to what we have now, and our results with those will be just outstanding."

Bad diets not our fault, says book

That feel-good guy, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, is at it again. In a report issued last week, Koop said nearly 1.5 million of the 2.1 million Americans who died last year died from diseases associated with diet.

Excuse me, but I'm getting just a bit tired of Dr. Koop. I want to see another study. This study would prove conclusively that Koop is the leading cause of depression and guilt in America. The guy doesn't want to see that, does he? According to Koop, there is no such thing as a harmless pleasure.

Don't drink alcohol, he says. Exercise regularly. Don't eat too much. Don't eat hamburgers or eggs or cheese. Don't drink coffee or tea. Don't make love with strangers. Don't do this, don't do that, don't do just about anything you might enjoy. And if you were to adhere to all of Koop's prescriptions and prescriptions, you still wouldn't live forever, though it might live like it.

It's all part of the New Puritanism sweeping this country, but don't get me started on that subject.

Of course, many of us ignore the advice of Koop and his ilk, but their constant nagging keeps us from enjoying our vices as we should. When we hear that butter and sour cream on baked potato, we experience a gnawing guilt. We inhale cigarette smoke and exhale regret.

But you had eaters out there can shed your guilt now, thanks to a new book, Melvin Konner, S. B. Eaton and Marjorie Shostak have written "The Paleolithic Prescription: A Program of Diet and Exercise and a Design for Living."

(That title could have used a diet.) The authors spent several years researching the diets of isolated peoples. They reasoned that since the world's flora and fauna have not changed much since man has been on the scene, the diet of those people would be similar to those of our remotest ancestors. The three decided there's reason why we don't eat right. Blame it on evolution.

The authors say your typical ancient hunter-gatherer type — we'll call him Org — had a healthier diet than we do because he had no choice. He didn't have access to low-fiber processed grains. His only sugar came in the form of fruit. The wild meat he ate was far leaner than the domesticated cattle and pigs we consume by the millions. For that matter, he wasn't into fried meat. Raw or slightly scorched was fine with him.

His food didn't contain much salt — unlike our processed foods, to which salt is added routinely. But very little salt occurs naturally in most foods. Org had to hunt for rare salt licks to get salt in any quantity. As a result, he ate a third of the salt that the average American couch potato eats.

That great health hazard, red meat, was harder to get, too, requiring a lot of stalking and chasing. Aerobic hunting was Org's main form of exercise. Aerobic running away was also popular. Never mind sub-tooth tigers, woolly mammoths, though they looked like Sesame Street characters, had nasty tempers, and didn't much care for being stuck with spears, tending to react to it by stepping on people.

Anyway, say the authors, the opportunity to over-indulge in things like salt and red meat and fats came so infrequently that Org could do so occasionally with no ill effects other than indigestion.

In fact, Org was programmed to pig out. His very cells knew that a time of food shortage was probably just around the corner. He might get his foot stepped on by a mammoth and be laid up someplace out in the prehistoric equivalent of East Jesus, with nothing to eat, in which case, some extra body fat would come in handy until he healed enough to get out and chase down something besides slugs and grubs.

We, of course, have inherited Org's built-in impulses. That explains why otherwise intelligent specimens like you and me eat all that dietary smarts of the average pig. While we have all the food we want five minutes away at the store or fast-food outlet, our genes still think it's the Stone Age. "Eat, eat, eat, or starve, starve, starve," they command.

Koop, C. Everett, it's like things that are bad for us. But it's not our fault. We just have stupid genes. So lay off.

Q. What is the difference between a finance charge and the annual percentage rate?

A. This does get a bit confusing. Finance charges boil down to the total of all the charges you pay when you obtain credit; and include interest, loan fees, finder's fee, points, service charges and any amount paid as a discount. Taxes, license fees, certain real estate closing costs and some legal fees are not included. The annual percentage rate, on the other hand, is the primary tool with which you can measure the costs of all type of credit, and make comparisons. The APR is the basic interest rate paid to the lender when money is borrowed. It's essentially a simple annual rate of interest which relates the finance charge to the amount of money you receive on credit and the time you have the money, under contract. The APR can be a very useful piece of information because with it, you are able to make comparisons of the terms offered by different lenders.

HOW TO COPE WITH GRIEF IN OLDER CHILDREN

In our last column we discussed how a child under the age of five deals with the death of a loved one. This week we will look at how an older child copes with a death in the family. After the age of five, most children begin to develop a concept of time and space and therefore begin to understand the finality of death. Between ages five and ten, children are still baffled about death, particularly the death of a young person, or if the death is sudden. They understand that old people and people who are sick for a long time sometimes die, but find it hard to comprehend when someone as young and healthy as themselves are suddenly no longer with them. Children this age may have many questions about death. It is important not only to answer these questions honestly, but also in a manner that reassures the child. The child should be told that the death of a young person or death by accident is rare and that he can expect to be around for a long time, but that such things do occur. At this age, it can be stressed upon a child that he bears a responsibility for his own health and behavior. That by behaving in a responsible manner in these areas he can reduce the possibility of illness or becoming an accident victim. If the death is that of a parent or sibling, the child will need a great amount of love and care in dealing with that loss. A child of this age group is still very dependent on his parents for survival and any change in his home environment is threatening to him. If the death has been child has picked up anxieties about death. If this is the case, you may wish to seek professional help for your child as soon as possible.

Funerals are family ceremonies and by his participation the child feels closer to the family. If a child does not want to participate in a funeral it could be a danger sign that the

UNLIKE THE MOVIES, WHEN YOU HIT A POWER LINE, THE SHOW'S OVER.

In the movies, the monster doesn't let anything stop him. Not even a few power lines.
But in the real world, a power line will stop anybody.

So before you do any work outside, remember that a metal ladder, a TV antenna, and even a tree trimmer can conduct electricity.

And don't forget to keep the kids away from utility poles, electric substations, and trees near power lines. Because we'd hate to see anyone get into trouble with a power line.

Unless, of course, it's in the movies.

THE LAW AND YOU

BY RICK REED
Attorney At Law

There is frequently a great deal of confusion when a worker is injured on the job regarding the procedure he should follow subsequent to the injury. In addition, many workers are not aware of exactly what benefits are provided for by the Illinois Workers' Compensation Act. The purpose of this article is to educate the working man regarding what can be expected following an on-the-job injury.

The first thing that should be noted is that the injured worker should immediately report the injury to his supervisor. The employee should insist that a written report be prepared so that there is a record regarding exactly what happened.

What benefits can the worker injured on the job expect to receive? The first thing the employee should insist upon is Temporary Total Disability (TTD), which is money paid to the employee while he is off work. In addition, the injured worker can expect to have all reasonable and necessary medical expenses related to the injury paid by the employer's insurance carrier. Finally, the person injured on the job will usually receive a lump sum settlement for the permanent nature of his injury. It is amazing how many working people are not aware that they are entitled to these permanent benefits, but rather are satisfied if they merely receive their TTD and have their medical bills paid.

Another frequent question deals with whether the injured worker can see his own doctor or whether he must use a physician chosen by the company. Illinois law allows the employee to choose his own doctor for purposes of treatment. The employer can request the injured worker to see a doctor chosen by the employer for purposes of examination. The employer will have to pay for this exam.

Finally, many injured workers do not understand that they are entitled to a hearing before an Arbitrator or that they can enter into a settlement agreement and thereby avoid the hearing. Which method the employee chooses to resolve the claim really depends upon the settlement offer made by the company's insurance carrier in a given case and whether the injured worker will require future medical care. An Industrial Commission hearing will allow the employee to still receive medical care in the future if it is related to the on-the-job injury. A settlement, on the other hand, will usually cut off the worker's rights to future medical coverage.

White House political activity alleged

By Edward T. Hearn
P-R/R Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A partisan political gathering on the White House grounds in June that included Illinois 21st District GOP candidate Robert Gaffner may have been illegally used by Republicans to match prospective House candidates with money, a Democratic campaign official has alleged.

White House officials said there is no basis for the allegation.

Arkansas' Rep. Beryl F. Anthony Jr., chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, asked the Justice Department on Monday to investigate whether the Reagan administration should be charged with "brazenly illegal use of federal property." It is against federal law for fund raising activities to occur on U.S. property.

Anthony, in his letter, said a press account in the Alton Telegraph detailed how a June 13 reception at the Old Executive Office Building within the White House compound was used to mix representatives of political action committees with prospective Republican candidates.

Besides Gaffner, about a half-dozen other Republicans reportedly met with officials from various groups. Organizations such as the National Association of Manufacturers, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and Free Congress, a conservative organization, were expected to attend.

Anthony, in his letter to Richard Dennis, acting associate attorney general for the Justice Department's criminal division, said the use of federal property in this fashion "requires a full and immediate investigation."

Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten said Monday evening that Anthony's letter had yet to arrive, adding that department officials would probably withhold comment until the end of a complete review.

White House officials said Anthony's charges were without foundation. Several officials, who asked not to be named, said Anthony's letter was politically motivated.

Franklin L. Lavin, deputy assistant to the President and director of political affairs, said he was in the White House on federal property June 13, 1988, and he was not one of the people who were invited to the reception.

Lavin said he was "reluctant" to provide a list of who attended the reception, adding that the White House "normally didn't release" material of that kind to the public.

Lavin said he would "look into it," but would delay release of any list until those on it could be warned about possible calls from the media.

Anthony's letter was sent eight days before the Aug. 9 special election in which Gaffner is running to fill the seat left vacant by the death of Rep. Melvin Price. The Democratic nominee is Jerry Costello.

The complaint by Anthony alleges two violations of federal law by the White House. Citing a June 10 Telegraph story, Anthony said the White House illegally used federal property and federal employees to help raise funds for Gaffner. The White House would not release the names of other House candidates at the reception.

The reception occurred after Gaffner and other congressional hopefuls met in the Oval Office with President Ronald Reagan and a later with Vice President George Bush. En route to the reception, Gaffner said, both Reagan and Bush endorsed him in his race against Costello, chairman of the St. Clair County Board.

•Zoning

Aldermen transfer mobile homes

"We repealed the trailer ordinance, but the zoning ordinance requires R-6 zoning. Bring it to the Planning and Zoning Board."

After much discussion, Skubish agreed to take the matter before the Planning and Zoning Board. The aldermen voted 9-3 to ask the board to listen to the proposal. Voting no were 2nd Ward Alderman Jim Miller, 3rd Ward Alderman Brett Hanke and 4th Ward Alderman Dan Partney.

"I want you to understand it will be the September meeting," Worthen said.

"He's in the audience and I hope he understands," Skubish said. "He wants to get his children in school."

The council's discussion centered around the requirement that to be zoned R-6 for mobile homes an area must be at least three acres.

"I believe Dan and Jeff brought this (requirement) in to kill trailers," 5th Ward Alderman Lloyd Bailey said. "As far as getting the three acres, there is no way. I think this is against the U.S. Constitution, against the 1st Amendment and everything else. Besides, it's downright ornery."

"The three acres do not have to be a single lot, Worthen said, just an overall area."

"We can't go get three acres of houses," Bailey said. "People would be up here like cabbage heads."

City Attorney Mark Goldenberg said the zoning ordinance includes provisions for amendment that must be followed.

These include, he said, the requirement to give public notice and hold a public hearing.

•Gaffner

Advertisement urges questioning

and such advertisement by Gaffner. The first, on Aug. 1, dealt with allegations that Costello has undue influence in the St. Clair County court system.

It listed more than 300 attorneys and their phone numbers in the 20th Circuit and urged voters to call them and ask if the allegations were true.

Gaffner added that he is still calling for Costello to stop running what he claims are untrue radio ads.

The ads claim that Gaffner has only held one elected office, a seat on the Greenville City Council, and cite several instances of what Costello calls a conflict of interest.

Gaffner said the radio ads failed to mention that he has been a trustee on the Kaskaskia

Community College Board of Trustees since being elected to the position in 1974.

"I provided him (Jerry) with all this information," he said.

Dave Wagner, Costello's campaign manager, said accusations in the newspaper ad are "trash."

"He (Gaffner) continues to rehash a lot of garbage and beat horses that have long since died," Wagner said.

Board members decline negotiation

again in 1987 by asking Stoll about the negotiations.

"That's all water under the bridge now," Johnson said at the meeting. "When it happened, I made the appropriate apologies. I can only attribute whatever happened to ignorance on my part. I can't say anything other than that."

When no one else volunteered to be a negotiator, the matter was put aside until after a two-hour executive session. When it was brought up a second time, the board remained silent.

Superintendent G.J. Walmsley said the item would be brought up again at the board's next meeting, Aug. 16.

The public meeting takes place at 7 p.m. at the board office, 20th and Adams streets.

Street department will make repairs

Worthen's ward was on the easement, but that the owner said the easement was damaged, the shed would be replaced.

"If it's on the easement, it's not our responsibility," 4th Ward Alderman Dan Partney said. "However, if the easement has been well kept, it is our responsibility to fill in the holes."

"We'll paint it gold if you say to do it," Warfield said. "I think 4th Ward Alderman Brett Hanke said that, while it was fine to talk about the right to do anything it wants on the easement, the repair work using only an easement is impossible. He said the $200 to $300 it cost for repairs was worth it since the alternative was loss of cooperation."

"I recommend we drop the issue and be a good neighbor," he said.

Fourth Ward Alderman Sharon Perjak said that if landscaping should be a constant expense, the city should consider requesting bids for a time-materials contract.

Seventh Ward Alderman Emerald Dawes asked if the street department damaged the shed.

"Yeah, we probably did," Warfield said. "Whatever you vote to do, we'll do."

"What's your recommendation?" Worthen asked. "You're the superintendent of streets. You're in charge of sewers. What do you recommend?"

Dawes said that if the city got "hard-nosed" it would never get the cooperation of the people who were needed.

"I think in the long run it pays to take care of our people," 6th Ward Alderman Judy Whitaker said. "They take care of the easements. Can you imagine the problems if everyone called the sanitation department to take care of the easements?"

Sixth Ward Alderman Walter Milton said landscaping should be automatic, but said that if the cost was going to be too high it should come before the council for a vote.

"Putting up fences, putting back sheds, you're not talking about landscaping," Milton said. "If the street department tore it down it should build it back."

"You think the street department should go into the business of building sheds?" Warfield asked.

The aldermen unanimously approved the bill list and Partney made the motion to pass the defining resolution. Worthen seconded the motion.

Voting to approve were: 1st Ward Aldermen Everett Morien and Casmer Skubish, Perjak, Partney, 5th Ward Alderman Ralph Astorian, Whitaker, Milton, Worthen and Dawes. Third Ward Alderman Lloyd Bailey and Hanke voted no. Miller did not vote. Pat Schuman and Paul Fisk were absent.

Costello doesn't measure up to Price

To the editor:

I am rapidly becoming weary of the continued efforts of Cong. Dick Durbin and U.S. Sen. Alan J. Dixon to "stuff" Jerry Costello down our throats" as congressman from the 21st District. As Dixon stated in his recent letter to the editor, "Costello's public record speaks for itself." But Dixon's recent attempt to compare and equate the record and personal traits of Costello to the late Cong. Mel Price serves only to denigrate the reputation of Price, a man of impeccable character. To put it in the simplest of possible terms, Price was not terribly fond of Costello. A story from the 1984 primary election serves best to "drive the point home" on the degree of disdain that Price held for Costello. Costello had very early in the Democratic primary race of 1984 received the endorsements of district political leaders and union representatives. Costello and his alter ego and business partner, attorney Amiel Cueto, met with Mel Price, Garadine Price and administrative aide Bill Hart in a Washington, D.C., area hotel.

Like "little Lord Fauntleroy," Costello remained upstairs in his room while Cueto attempted to force Price out of the 1984 Democratic primary election by boasting of Costello's support and how Costello would embarrass Price, should Price choose to run again in 1984. Price quietly listened to everything Cueto had to say and then told Cueto to tell Costello to go ahead and run if he wanted to and that Price would beat Costello anyway.

So shocked were Cueto and Costello by the "old man's" response, they scurried back to Belleville with their tails between their legs and dreamed up "a fairy tale" to explain why Costello had chosen not to run for Congress in 1984.

Price never promised to endorse or support Costello for Congress in the 1988 primary and didn't vote for Costello in the primary election March 15. So please, Mr. Durbin and Mr. Dixon, don't equate Price and Costello.

Costello may certainly be in the mold of an Alan J. Dixon or a Richard Durbin, but records clearly indicate there is no way in the world to compare Mel Price with the St. Clair County Board chairman. MARVIN L. FRANCE

Unfair blame for closing of brewery

To the editor:

I think it's time to set the record straight about a radio commercial being aired by the Republican candidate for Congress, Bob Gaffner.

Mr. Gaffner suggests that the closing of the Stag Brewery in Belleville is due to some imagined inattentiveness on the part of County Board Chairman Jerry Costello. Nothing could be farther from the truth, and Gaffner knows that. Costello was in the forefront of those who stood ready to assist when negotiations were under way to reopen the brewery in 1979.

Since his election in 1980, he has kept abreast of the operations at the plant, and on innumerable occasions has inquired of me if his office could be of help to the brewery.

When the state Legislature was debating a tax incentive for the Stag Brewery, Costello was in Springfield lobbying on their behalf. And when the closing was announced, he was the first to call and ask about putting together an incentive package to reverse that decision.

While Gaffner was taping his ludicrous commercial, Costello was in Chicago with me and representatives of the Department of Commerce and Community Affairs — urging Heileman to reconsider the closing.

Other issues aside, for Gaffner to seize upon the plight of 250 workers who stand to lose their jobs at Stag Brewery, in order to nurture his own political ambitions, is unconscionable.

To suggest that Costello is at fault for the closing of the Stag Brewery is ridiculous, and the people of the 21st District should know that. MAYOR RICHARD BRAUER

Hatred, fear can result in violence

To the editor:

There are little signs of poison spreading across the land. A weekly news magazine has an article about "jokes" on some campuses that make fun of Jewish-American women. A visitor to Chicago told me he does not remember visiting any other American city, including cities in the South, where black-white hostility is so visible and so deep-seated.

In Ecuador, a candidate for president is defeated who makes speeches about "a Jewish conspiracy." Fortunately, he lost the election, but the hate and fear that he spread will not die quickly.

In Chicago, a city employee with access to top officials there talks the same poison, and adds that Jewish doctors are afflicting black children with AIDS through infection.

After Polish "jokes" seem to finally have died, suddenly one day I am told two.

And not just anti-Polish jokes. They come in anti-black and anti-Hispanic versions, too.

On a Chicago radio call-in program months ago, when I appeared to tell my proposal to put more Americans to work, one woman called and said, "You know why I'm out of work, don't you? No, I admitted to her, I do not. 'The blacks are getting all the jobs,' she assured me.

If she were working, she would not have been on the phone to rail against blacks. When things go wrong, or do not go quite right, it is easy to blame "them," whoever is an easy scapegoat. It might be blacks or Hispanics or Jews or Poles or Italians or almost any group you can name.

If you want to believe something, you can build the facts to support your belief, no matter how ridiculous and farfetched it is.

I remember some years ago receiving a letter from a Turkish-American telling me that there is an Armenian conspiracy to take over the United States.

He outlined a list of key Armenian leaders who had reached positions of responsibility in journalism and business and government. And the passion of his letter was clearly so intense that nothing I or anyone could say would dissuade him.

Pure, utter nonsense, of course. But it is worse than that.

If people want to believe in Santa Claus or the tooth fairy or their horoscope or that the world is flat, no great harm is done.

I have a relative who believes that no one has ever walked on the moon, that it was all a movie set that the television producers created. Wrong? Yes. Is any real harm done by that belief? No.

But when myths stir hatred and fear, then great harm can be done. Hitler is an illustration of that. And, unfortunately, history is loaded with other examples of unprincipled people, who trouble themselves by hates and fears and sometimes lead others to hate and fear.

Whenever racial or religious or national prejudices rear their vicious, ugly heads — whether in the form of "jokes" or serious talk — make clear where you stand.

The ultimate result of hatred and fear is violence.

The ultimate result of a more understanding society is a brighter future for your children and my children and all people.

Choosing in congressional race will be tough for independents

The choice is tough in the 21st Congressional District race.

St. Clair County Board Chairman Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, proclaimed himself frontrunner last week, but Bob Gaffner, R-Greenville, is waging a potent battle against his better-funded opponent.

What makes the choosing difficult is the men are similar on many issues: both want an anti-abortion amendment to the Constitution, the United States to place a man on Mars by 2000, use of our armed forces to wage war on drugs, funding to provide home health care to the elderly, child care for working women, and to maintain current gun control laws.

They disagree on a few points, with Costello taking more pro-union stands than Gaffner, who supports business, but the differences probably won't convince most people how to vote.

"Ability is another point where the men have near parity."

Costello comes on strong as the man who can get things done, who heads important regionwide committees and who has an admirable knowledge of facts pertaining to national and local issues that are vital to a potential congressional leader.

Gaffner seems less in the know, not being as steeped in politics as Costello, but we think Gaffner is able to do a top-notch job as the area's congressman. His apparent hobnobbing with big wig, national-level politicians from both Missouri and Illinois offers the potential for united, regional efforts to get good things done.

On ability, the candidates are roughly equal, but give a slight edge for experience to Costello.

Still, on ability and policy, the differences aren't great, which makes the personal images projected by Gaffner and Costello the point that may well decide this election.

There is, sadly but undeniably, a sleaze factor in this election, and both candidates have stepped into it.

For Gaffner, it's the allegation that he missed 25 percent of his meetings when he served as a Greenville alderman. Further, he admits that he voted (legally at that time) to buy cars for the city from his father (the low bidder), and on a couple of other matters that would these days be considered a conflict of interest.

The charges against Gaffner, representing "news" that's some 18 or more years old, seem to indicate that Costello feels something, anything, has to be thrown out so that Gaffner doesn't come off as such a white knight. The effect of the effort is yet to be determined, but the allegations pale beside those Costello has to endure.

Costello is plagued by the allegation that a fellow, local party member, Centreville Township Supervisor Francis Touchette, forced campaign contributions out of township employees. Costello has accepted campaign donations from Touchette.

Prior to the election, area attorneys charged Costello with exerting undue influence on 20th Judicial Circuit appointments. An inquiry board has since "cleared" Costello, but not very convincingly since it offered no comment.

Though Costello has raised hundreds of thousands to conduct his campaign, he has refused to return a mere $5,000 that some might consider "tainted" money because it comes from a PAC headed by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, a man accused of serious ethics violations.

There are other allegations involving Costello, but the point is that he carries with him both a great deal of baggage and good points that will make voters work very hard before making up their minds, as we worked very hard to make up ours.

Our final conclusion is that both men can do the job, that they are much alike on the issues, but in terms of the public's confidence, we have to choose Gaffner, and believe you should, too.

Manufacturing climate better

Of the 27 "manufacturing intensive" states, Illinois now ranks 18th in its manufacturing climate, as determined by the annual Grant Thornton study. That ranking is an improvement, but our state obviously is still lagging behind many others — in terms of its attractiveness — in seeking more businesses and jobs.

Not all groups would agree with the criteria and the scorekeeping formula, which were set after consultation with state industrial associations, but the judging was done objectively. And the study, at least, provides insight into firms' attitudes about where to locate their divisions.

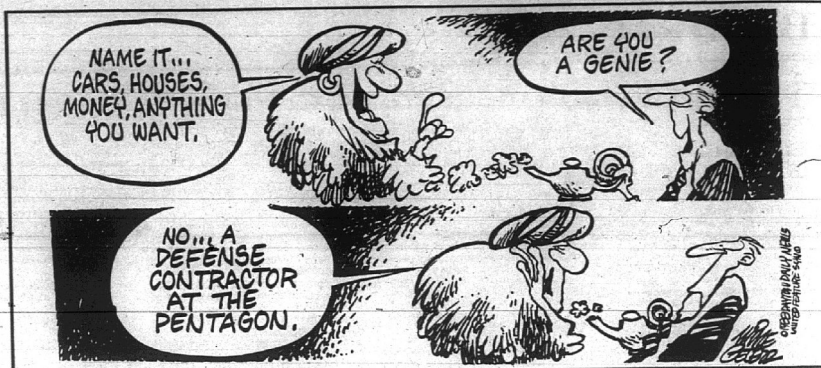

The study analyzed labor costs, state and local government fiscal policies, availability and productivity of resources such as energy and workers, state-regulated costs like compensation, and life quality issues including education and health care.

The happiest result of the study was that Illinois no longer is dead last among the 43 contiguous states in its image in industrialists' eyes regarding government-controlled factors. It moved up four places.

Manufacturing employment in Illinois in the past year increased by 5,900. But since the Thornton studies began in 1979, Illinois has lost 344,300 jobs, more than any other state. This is 21.8 percent of the manufacturing jobs lost in the United States in that period, and 27 percent of the Illinois manufacturing base.

Sadly, the statistics aren't "manufactured"; they're real.

Animal epidemic hits our area

To the editor:

I am writing this letter to alert all pet owners of the distemper epidemic that has hit our area. Parvovirus, or distemper, is a terrible and often fatal disease that attacks a dog's central nervous system, subjecting the animal to extreme pain and paralysis.

Its symptoms include, but are not limited to, the following: 1) lack of energy and appetite; 2) coughing; 3) runny nose and a matting of the eyes; 4) trouble walking or keeping balance; and 5) seizures and foaming at the mouth.

If your pet exhibits any of these symptoms or any other abnormal behaviors, I desperately urge you to seek veterinary help at once.

I only wish that I had known about this earlier, for maybe my 3 month old puppy, Bo, would still be alive today. So, please, vaccinate your dogs immediately, or have your puppies vaccinated as soon as they are old enough, so you won't have to watch your pet deteriorate before your very eyes.

Objects to advertisement in paper

To the editor:

Letter writing is not my cup of tea, but I just had to get this one off, just to get your response.

In the June 30 issue of the Press Record, a news article appeared on page 2C under the heading of "List of fireworks limited." It lists the legal as well as the illegal kinds according to the state fire marshal. It goes on and lists the number of injuries caused by them. It says that state law provides that it shall be unlawful to knowingly possess, offer for sale, expose for sale, sell at retail, or explode any fireworks. In the same issue there appear on pages 2C, 10C and 4D full quarter-page ads for fireworks for sale in Missouri.

I find this pretty hard to swallow. It seems to me that the almighty dollar means more to you than the safety of youngsters.

Upset with two aldermen

To the editor:

As a concerned citizen, I attended the July 29 City Council meeting and was appalled when I heard 3rd Ward Alderman Brett Hanks make a motion not to allow the citizenry in attendance to address the council on the pit bull ordinance.

I received my second jolt when 2nd Ward Alderman Jim Miller quickly seconded the motion. The aldermen have this right, but is this type of action a benefit to the community?

The advocates in attendance followed proper procedures by filing a request with the city clerk to be listed on the council agenda. Grogg to the aldermen that tried to silence the public's voice and cheers to the aldermen that remembered they were elected to provide a government that is for the people. Dictatorship does not fit this mold.

The objecting aldermen would better serve the public by policing their respective wards to leash and muzzle the roaming dogs rather than the voices of their constituents.

Some council members demanded that the advocates take their complaints about the pit bull ordinance back to the committee. This is a game of flip and flop; if the council wants citizenry participation in formulating an ordinance, a public meeting should be called before passing an ordinance — not after it becomes law.

I feel that as a majority, the council tries to do what is right, but it is depressing and suppressing when they display arrogance and become self-serving.

Spending tax monies in an unbusinesslike manner and the practices of nepotism and cronyism are not democracy.

On recognition

Newspapers recognize those deserving it, but sometimes there's disagreement about what deserves recognition.

Something should get attention if it is news, that is, if most readers did not know about it might want to know about the matter.

To explain, if someone is elected to public office, it is universally accepted that there should be an announcement because taxpayers want to know who will spend their money.

Definitions of news vary. Though the big-city paper normally does nothing with a story about a person being elected as a small club's officer, the community newspaper treats the information as news because it is a record marking a person's life, like high school and college graduations, weddings, engagements, anniversaries, births and deaths.

"Accomplishments" are less easy to deal with than "news of record" because it's sometimes hard to distinguish a true accomplishment from grandstanding for attention.

Is it an accomplishment, for example, that somebody wins a beauty contest? Sure. But what if a parent paid a fee, say $50, and each child in the contest won in some category? That's a great ego boost for the kid, but it's not news.

Is it an accomplishment that someone builds a house? No, not normally, but it's another matter if a high school class does it. That makes it unusual, interesting, and people will read it.

Then there are the gardeners. They produce big ones, dwarfed ones, oddities — we could run such stories endlessly, and each time minimize reader interest in vegetables until no one cares. Our answer is to write about the first report of such growth each season, as we recently did.

Some of those well-paid PR hucksters at colleges have come up with a new angle to hype their employers. They announce So and So will attend Such and Such College in Podunk, Ark. So what? Unless something unusual were involved, placing undue significance on mere attendance devalues the true accomplishment of graduating.

We can't honor every publicity request, but nonetheless encourage you to call if you have something of interest. We've found our readers are intelligent and, more often than not, when they think they've got something to share, they're right.

Dixon urges streamlined buying plan for Pentagon

By Edward T. Hearn

WASHINGTON — Sen. Alan Dixon's plan to streamline Pentagon buying procedures has been given a boost by David Packard, chairman of Hewlett-Packard Co., the California computer giant.

Packard, testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the Pentagon continues to rely on "three or four chains of command" in the acquisition of major weapons systems. Packard said a single chain, under one Pentagon official, was more desirable.

"I think so far they have flunked out on this issue," Packard told the panel, on which Dixon serves. The Illinois Democrat has been an ardent supporter of the kind of system Packard favors.

Two years ago, President Ronald Reagan named Packard chairman of the commission that took an in-depth look at Defense Department procurement habits. The Packard Commission suggested creation of a procurement czar who would oversee the weapons-buying process.

"I told (Pentagon officials) that the commission intended to give them the message that there should be only one chain of command in acquisition. Apparently they did not get the message," Packard told the Senate panel in a prepared statement.

At the urging of Dixon and other Senate Armed Services Committee members, Congress created the procurement czar formally known as the Undersecretary of Defense for Acquisition — but the first person to hold the post resigned and told Congress about his frustrations in building a meaningful role.

Dixon said Packard's remarks were telling and could help win Congressional support for reform.

Aldi store to open here Aug. 11

GRANITE CITY — With free coffee, doughnuts and soda pop for the kids, Aldi Foods will open its newest store Aug. 11 at 3375 Peeling Road. Purvis said Aldi "guarantees top quality merchandise at competitively lower prices."

"We're called the stock-up store by our customers," he said. "They can fill their refrigerators and shelves with great food values."

Purvis said lower prices are available because customers aren't paying for fancy displays, background music, contests, check cashing and other "luxuries."

Aldi offers national brands and its own labels, but "Aldi does not and will not sell generics because the quality just isn't up to the Aldi high standards," Purvis said.

The store hours are planned to be 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday. It will be closed Sundays.

'Release of liability' vital part of VA loans

Dear Mr. Campbell: This is a warning to those who taken a Veterans Administration loan. In 1980, my husband, a military officer, purchased a home in California using a VA loan. Ten months later he sold the home. In 1987, he was informed that, in 1983, the owner defaulted on the loan and the house had been sold at a foreclosure sale. We now owe the government about $9,500 — the net principal amount remaining after the foreclosure sale.

We are unable to find any record of an attempt by the VA to notify us, though my husband's address of record (his parents' residence) has not changed in 10 years. Why the VA waited four years to notify us of this situation remains a mystery. They have not been helpful when contacted.

We are going to challenge this action and would appreciate any advice or comments.

D.T. Answer: We're all creatures of habit, and it's become a longstanding habit to lump FHA (Federal Housing Administration) loans right in with VA because good old Uncle Sam is behind both programs. There is a critical, but subtle, difference between them: FHA loans are an insurance program; in VA loans the government is guaranteeing the loan to the lender.

That does not sound like any great shakes in terms of differences, but it is. When someone assumes your FHA loan and then subsequently defaults on it and the home is sold in foreclosure, you — as the original borrower — are not pursued to make up any deficiency because this is paid from the insurance on which you, and everyone else holding an FHA loan, have been paying premiums.

But, with a VA loan — and in a similar situation — the VA can chase you right into the grave if it is money out of the VA's pocket.

"It's in all our literature about assuming a VA loan," said George Moorman, the VA's director of loan policy in Washington. "We do everything possible to warn them of the danger but, ultimately, it is the responsibility of the lawyer, or the real estate broker, sitting in at the closing to underline this danger."

Why did it take the VA four years to chase you down? "I have no idea," Moorman said. "We've charged with making a reasonable effort to find the veteran but, of course, all papers pertaining to a deficiency would go to the home address on the loan."

Does this mean you are dead in the water and going to have to come up with that $9,500? Not necessarily. Moorman said, go to your local VA office — even though it is way after the fact — you still may get a "release of liability."

"We'll go back and look into the credit worthiness of his buyer at the time of the transfer," Moorman said. "If the veteran would have been eligible for the release of liability at that time, then he can get the release retroactively, and he's off the hook."

Colonial Bank, Magna Bank of Granite City merge July 1

GRANITE CITY — Effective July 30, Colonial Bank of Granite City consolidated with Magna Bank of Granite City.

Colonial's name changed to Magna Bank of Granite City, and it became the Colonial Banking Center of Magna Bank of Granite City.

"We have been affiliated with Magna Bank of Granite City through common ownership during the past five years, and we feel this is the proper time to combine our offices for the convenience of our customers," Colonial President Donald E. Van Horn said.

Business can be transacted at any of the following offices: Main Banking Center, 20th Street and Edison Avenue, 451-5400; Belmore Banking Center, Belmore Village Shopping Center, Namecki Road and Jill Avenue, 451-5490; and Colonial Banking Center, Maryville and Pontoon roads, 451-5505.

"All deposits and loans made with Colonial Bank of Granite City prior to July 30 will become deposits and loans of Magna Bank of Granite City," Van Horn said.

"I extend our appreciation to those who have chosen Colonial Bank. We are excited about our future in the Granite City area, and we look forward to many more years of service."

The two banks are affiliates of Magna Group Inc. Prior to joining Magna on Aug. 31, 1987, they were known as First City National Bank and Colonial Bank of Granite City.

William S. Badgley, Magna Group chairman, said, "Many banks throughout the country, as the law permits, have begun to merge to reduce costs of operation, which translates into savings for the total organization."

Melvin C. Wilmsmeyer, chairman of Magna Bank of Granite City, said that with the combining of the two banks, customers will be able to transact their business at any of the three centers, and the automatic teller machine in Pontoon Beach will continue to serve customers of the combined banks.

Assets of Magna Bank of Granite City now total $100 million. Outside directors of Magna Colonial Bank have become directors of Magna Bank of Granite City.

Magna Group, a holding company based in Belleville, owns 12 banks, a trust company and a data processing firm. It has agreements pending to acquire New Holland (Ill.) Farmers Bank and the First National Bank, Mascoutah.

Consumer tips

Pros, cons of VCR clubs, memberships reviewed

By Neil Hartigan
Illinois attorney general

Q. Another VCR club has just opened in our town. Are there any basic differences in VCR clubs?

A. Yes. The growing popularity of video cassette recorder tapes is simultaneously creating a competitive video club industry to service its viewers.

You should keep in mind that more established video clubs usually serve a large clientele and have an ever-expanding supply of tapes to rent or buy.

While small neighborhood clubs might be more convenient to use the fact that they have fewer members could result in a more limited selection. This could eventually turn off prospective members and lead to the demise of the business.

Some things to look for and ask about when shopping for a video club include:

•Is there a membership fee? How much? One-time or annual?

•How long has the club been in business?

•Make sure the club has a wide assortment of films in which you are interested, and in the video format (Beta, VHS) that your machine operates.

•Check on daily rental fees and late fees.

•While catalogs might lead you to believe many tapes are available, what you can see on the shelves often gives a better indication of what is normally available.

16 VCR tips

Q. Can you give us some tips on buying a VCR?

A. Selecting a video cassette recorder is much simpler than it first appears. There are two VCR formats: Beta and VHS. Because the size of VHS and Beta tape cartridges is different, VHS tapes cannot be used in Beta recorders and vice versa.

A consumer's decision to buy Beta or VHS system should be based on what types of tapes his or her friends use, or the selection of movies available in either Beta or VHS from the video rental store the viewer intends to use.

Even the most basic VCRs perform the essential functions of recording and playback.

Additional features, such as remote control (wired or wireless), programmable timers that can be preset to record TV programs days, even weeks in advance, cable readiness, high-fidelity stereo sound, and multiple heads (for slow or stop motion), can drive the cost of the basic models up dramatically.

Granite City BPW members charter Fairview chapter

GRANITE CITY — Nine members of the Granite City Business and Professional Women attended a special chartering ceremony of the new Fairview Heights BPW June 26 at the Fairview Heights Ramada Inn.

At the ceremony, state officers from the Illinois BPW Federation inducted the charter members and installed officers.

A reception was held to honor the new organization.

An official BPW lecturer, purchased with contributions from area organizations including the Granite City club, was presented to the new chapter by past District 14 President Lil Marzluft.

Marzluft and past State President Annellen P. Smith, both

Granite City members, were given special recognition for their help in the chartering effort.

Other Granite City members attending were Gloria Bruhe, Ruth Ann Gabriel, Jane Isenburgh, Hazel Rollins, Lorene Sadzala, Becky Selt and Van Stuart.

GOCS proposes power rate freeze

CHICAGO — The Governor's Office of Consumer Services (GOCS) has filed testimony on behalf of the Village of Buffalo proposing a multi-year rate plan for Illinois Power (IP) that would freeze ratebasing issues associated with the Clinton power plant. IP disagrees with the findings.

The rate proposal would freeze current rates until 1990. At that time, there would be an increase of 4.7 percent to 6 percent.

The Illinois Commerce Commission would decide the exact increase based on its determination of how much of the Clinton plant's cost was prudent.

Between 1990 and 1996, rates would reflect a "used and useful" disallowance, which would deny IP an equity return on imprudent investment.

Under the proposal, a return on the prudent investment portion of the Clinton plant would be phased in over five years beginning in 1996.

GOCS said it expects, however, that fuel savings at that time would offset any potential rate increases from the phase-in.

MAC awarded 1987 Air Force small business award

This award focuses attention

Consumers would experience only a one-time rate increase through the balance of this century, a GOCS spokesman said.

"The proposal balances the interests of consumers in affordable rates against the need for a financially viable utility into the foreseeable future," said Alvin K. Grandys, director of GOCS.

"We believe ratepayers should not pay for a plant that is not needed, nor for the costs of Clinton which were imprudently incurred. This rate moderation plan accomplishes this, while allowing IP to remain an investment grade utility through at least the year 2000," he said.

The GOCS proposal was co-sponsored by the Office of Public Counsel, the Citizens' Utility Board and the Small Business Utility Advocate.

IP reports sharp earnings drop

DECATUR — Illinois Power Co. has reported earnings of 22 cents per common share for the second quarter, ended June 30. This compares to 81 cents per common share for the second quarter of 1987.

For the 12 months ended June 30, 1988, earnings were $2.97 per common share. Earnings per common share for the same period during 1987 were $3.93.

The 1988 second-quarter earnings are lower than last year due largely to new accounting standards effective this year.

Those standards no longer allow the recording of a return on shareholders' investment in costs for the Clinton Power Station not yet being recovered by electric rates.

A negotiated settlement related to certain Clinton issues also contributed to the decline in earnings, while an accounting change in 1988 to begin recording unbilled revenues had a positive effect on earnings.

The 16th consecutive dividend, 66 cents per common share, was paid Aug. 1.

Dixon

Streamlined plan draws supporters

legislation. "I think it would give it tremendous impetus," Dixon said. "We truly don't have an integrated, direct line of authority yet."

When the Pentagon procurement scandal broke in June, Dixon responded by offering legislation that would require the Acquisition Secretary become the central authority on procurement, overseeing the work of procurement chiefs within each branch of the armed service.

However, addressing the immediate problem of alleged procurement corruption, Dixon also offered regulations preventing former defense officials from taking jobs with defense firms until at least two years after leaving the government.

The Dixon bill's toughest features include civil penalties for Pentagon officials and defense contractors who unlawfully exchange information or taint contract talks with promises of jobs in the future.

The acquisition post that the Dixon-sponsored law created in 1986 was conceived as a procurement czar, answerable only to the secretary of Defense, the president and Congress, Dixon said.

But rivalry among the armed services, each of which has its own procurement officer, dissolved the authority of the first Under Secretary for Acquisition, Richard Godwin.

Packard, who suggested several legislative reforms, told the Senate panel Congress should consider passing two-year defense budgets as a cost-saving step.

"A two-year budget and multi-year funding of major programs are absolutely necessary to implement enduring agreement on military forces, and as I am sure you know, billions would be saved," Packard said.

But Packard, in a rebuke of Congress, said he wasn't sanguine about the prospects for Pentagon funding beyond one year at a time.

"The real reason Congress will not approve multi-year funding, in my opinion, is that to do so would severely limit their 'pork barrel' opportunities," Packard said.

In other recommendations, Packard said Congress should consider slashing Pentagon acquisition personnel by 20 percent but giving long-term appointments to acquisition officials so they can become experts in the field.

Granite City (Ill.) Press-Record, Thursday, August 4, 1988 — 1C

Impact of new interstate called immense by BAC president

Economic resurgence and population gains for the Granite City area were predicted here this week by Joseph Cipri, president of Belleville Area College District 522.

He cited the July 26 completion of Interstate 255 and its circumferential route around the bi-state area; education and training programs of the 2,100-square-mile community college district; and the possible resumption of production at American Steel Foundries in Granite City next year.

"NOT SINCE 1966 has Illinois been without a pending project in the nation's mammoth Interstate and Defense Highway System. The section just dedicated extends six miles and cost $15 million to build."

It was the last of this state's 1,700 interstate miles, which provide limited access, at least four traffic lanes, and safe curves, inclines and departure lanes.

Illinois has invested $265 million in federal and state funds on I-255 since construction began on it in 1977. The Illinois part of the bi-state highway circle also includes areas of Interstate 270.

JUST AS I-270 sparked growth at many intersections in Missouri, I-255 and I-270 can lead to blossoming of businesses and other activity at Illinois interchanges, the educator said.

He added that Illinois sites are landier to St. Louis than many areas to the west, where developers are trying to "stretch the St. Louis area to Kansas City."

BAC has worked with Granite City Steel, A.O. Smith Corp., Nestle and other firms in providing training and is eager to work with others here, he said, emphasizing the importance of close links between the college and the community.

Addressing Granite City Rotarians, he was accompanied by Lee Knoebel, executive dean of the Granite City Campus; Harold Johnson, GOC dean of students; Violet Thaxton, dean of students at GOC; and Kathy O'Dell, BAC public relations director.

CREDIT TRANSFERS from the two-year college to senior universities function well and will be further expedited, Dr. Cipri promised Tuesday's luncheon gathering.

He didn't bring up any negatives about the college board but noted that voters throughout the BAC district will decide Nov. 8 whether to set up seven subdistricts from which to elect the trustees.

Improvements have been made this year to the GOC exterior, interior and parking lot, he said.

BAC's value was described as including an unusually wide variety of courses, offered at nominal cost, during an era in which the overall expense of higher education is soaring.

DUE TO THE VARIETY of the instruction, and class sizes of 25 to 30 compared to more than 200 at some colleges, BAC has been able to attract students of all ages; the average BAC age is now 31.

The speaker praised the caliber of teaching here, saying that at many universities faculty members assign graduate assistants to do much of the instruction rather than handling it themselves.

BAC's more than 2,000 full- and part-time teachers and more than 20,000 full- and part-time students make it the third largest institution of higher learning in the St. Louis metropolitan area, the club was told.

Regional Roundup

By Bill Winter

"EDUCATION is a lifelong need," Cipri said in pointing to changing technology that creates new jobs and new skill requirements.

BAC students run the gamut from university-bound young people to retirees seeking new hobbies or vocations. Many Metro East residents are re-entering the job market or changing their careers, it was noted.

The college district, which has a $15.5 million yearly budget, was pictured as ready to provide "resources and motivation" and to serve as a catalyst for progress at the community and regional levels.

SATELLITES at the three campuses, Granite City, Belleville and Red Bud, now give easy access to a vast amount of knowledge, information and training, Cipri said. The equipment is portable and can be placed temporarily at an industry or other on-the-job site.

Asserting that welfare has become the biggest cost for state governments, Cipri said education is the solution. He called on community colleges to play a leading role in upgrading adults' literacy and knowledge.

He said he is intent on serving the entire eight-county district — St. Clair, Madison, Monroe, Bond, Montgomery, Clinton, Randolph and Perry.

On Tuesday, he was at the Cahokia site where some of the aviation program is taught, and he also went to Granite City and Red Bud that day; yesterday, his schedule included the BAC facilities at Chester.

BAC'S FOUNDATION is a new mechanism which can aid in, extending college services, Cipri said in urging local involvement.

Innovative approaches were said to be essential to keep pace with the world's storehouse of knowledge, now doubling every four years.

Praising the Granite City Campus building and staff, Cipri pledged his best efforts to maintain and enhance the college's role in many aspects of life throughout Metro East.

Illinois road work booming

SPRINGFIELD — Illinois Transportation Secretary Greg Baine has announced that $950 million in road work contracts will be in place by August. The Road and Construction Fund balances, which are also at their peak, currently total $441.5 million.

Money from these funds is used to finance highway construction, road repair and bridge work.

Balances in the two funds peak during July as a result of truck registrations and the department's effort to streamline payments owed by the federal government to the state for work it has completed on the federal-aid highway system.

Baine said, "Balances in the funds reach their normal peak during the first two weeks of July as the Department enters the period when the maximum amount of road work will be under way throughout the state."

"These balances are needed to assure timely payment of bills as contractors complete various phases of highway repairs and construction around the state."

"More than $750 million in obligations for road work from past years is on the books. Another $200 million in contracts for road construction from June and August competitive bidding periods make up the $950 million in contract obligations," Baine said.

"The amount of road work put under contract by the Department of Transportation will decline in the next five years, with the state's annual average road program dropping to $715 million," Baine said.

Balances in the two funds are artificially-high at this time of year since payment for outstanding work is held up until a new appropriation bill is signed and endorsed as required by law.

Baine also pointed out that $60 million in motor vehicle registrations came in during the period of June 30 through July 7. The majority of truck registrations for the year arrive during June and July. In addition, road fund balances are high because the state has received more than $53 million in federal-aid highway funds in the past two weeks for work already completed.

Public pressure sought to speed up Clark Bridge

The Clark Bridge replacement project could founder if area residents don't pressure federal officials to act, said President John Pennekamp of the Greater Alton Twin Rivers Growth Association.

The group has organized a letter-writing campaign to lobby legislators in favor of the $70 million bridge plan. Pennekamp said the group will focus on the bridge project during its annual state-of-local business dinner.

Illinois Department of Transportation officials plan to take bids for preliminary work on the bridge this December. But Pennekamp emphasized federal officials still haven't approved project funding.

Local officials hope to get $56 million for the bridge — 80 percent of the total cost — from the federal government.

Pennekamp said he was "cautiously optimistic" the project will get funding despite fierce competition for bridge-building funds.

The federal government has allotted $200 million annually for bridge projects nationwide, Pennekamp said. He fears officials will overlook the 60-year-old bridge in favor of other projects.

Dixon, Simon foresee victory by Democrats

P-R/J Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Illinois Democrats walked away from their 1988 national party convention refreshed and ready to take on the Republicans in November.

Sens. Alan Dixon and Paul Simon, who shared seats with the state convention delegation, returned to Capitol Hill enthusiastic about the party's chance for capturing the White House.

"I think we emerged very strong," Dixon said. "We sent the appropriate moderate-center message to the country, and it appears to me that we are in a realistic position to carry our state for the presidency for the first time since 1964."

"If we can carry Illinois, then we're in good shape," said Simon, who also noted the state has not favored a Democrat in 24 years.

Roger Poole, a delegate from Freeburg, shared that optimism. "The Democrats who crossed over to the Republican Party with (President Ronald) Reagan are coming home again," said Poole, a first-time convention-goer and business manager for District 8, International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Simon, Dixon and Poole said they felt good about the unity they saw in Atlanta despite obvious disagreements between supporters of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who sought a hard-line liberal approach to many issues, and a conservative wing, which hopes to woo Reagan Democrats back to their party.

"It was, by Democratic standards, a fairly dull convention, which is good news for the Democrats because we have had a great many divisive conventions that have cost us victory in the past," said Dixon, a convention veteran whose career with party politics has lasted 37 years.

Dixon cited as an example the 1968 convention in Chicago and said the bitter debate there cost Hubert Humphrey the White House. "This time things were different, though," he said.

"My impression is that Democrats of every different philosophical persuasion — from the left to the right of the party — are pretty united behind this ticket," Dixon said.

"We sent a pretty decent message to the public by adopting the moderate plank on the platform and rejecting the more extremist planks," Dixon said. "The selection of Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as the vice presidential nominee gives the ticket regional and philosophical balance."

While some delegates continued to wear their Jackson buttons on the convention floor after Bentsen accepted the vice presidential nomination, the three delegates predicted that Illinois Democrats would have no trouble working together as the general election approaches.

"They have a choice between this ticket and the Republican ticket," Dixon said, "and it's obvious that choice is one that's not going to give them a problem."

Often named as a likely state chairman for the Dukakis campaign in Illinois, Simon said it is natural for distrust to linger between the Jackson and Dukakis forces, but added that it would be a matter of time before they come together.

"That's what politics is all about. It's building coalitions," Simon said.

Poole shared Simon's optimism, noting that the state's delegates had agreed on several concessions, including naming Jackson the delegation's honorary favorite son, and had provided the Jackson camp an opportunity to bring some platform planks to the floor.

"I think it's going to send the Democrats back home, ready to work hard," he said.

Regardless of the unity, Poole predicted a "a hard-fought race." He said he plans to do a little of everything, such as stuffing envelopes, organizing voter registration and planning fundraisers.

"We've got a lot of work to do," he concluded.

However, Dixon pointed optimistically to voter planks taken in GOP-leaning districts of the state.

"If these figures hold up," he said, "it looks like we will have a pretty big victory."

State news

Legislation aids radioactive disposal

Legislation enabling the Illinois Department of Nuclear Safety to proceed with efforts to locate a low-level radioactive waste disposal facility in Illinois was signed into law.

The bill requires local community approval prior to the final selection of a site, as well as giving authority to the local governing body to shut down operations at a plant if certain types of hazardous waste are accepted. Sites are being studied near Martinsville in Clark County and near Geff in Wayne County.

The federal 1985 Low-Level Radioactive Waste Police Amendment Act requires each state or regional compact of states to provide for the disposal of waste generated within its borders. Illinois has joined with Kentucky to form the Central Midwest Compact Commission for the purpose of establishing a low-level radioactive waste plant in Illinois by January 1993.

Open Space Act involves public input

Gov. Jim Thompson last week signed a bill that amends the Township Open Space Act to provide for greater public knowledge and involvement in approving township open space plans. The Township Open Space Act restricts development in areas of more than 50 acres in communities for preservation and conservation of natural and scenic resources. The amendment states that a township board must first hold a public hearing before adopting an open space plan.

State employee gets check for suggestion

A state employee has received a check for $5,000 for an idea that will save the state nearly $1 million a year. The suggestion reduces the amount of required interest payments paid on certain funds held by the state.

The winner, Gerri Poole, a fiscal officer of the Illinois Public Treasurers' Investment Pool, received her reward at a luncheon in Springfield to kick off a new promotional campaign by the State Employees' Suggestion Award Board.

"We've had nearly 900 ideas submitted, and the state has $1.2 million, and awarded $16,000 to state employees so far," said state Sen. John Davidson, Springfield. "The board is confident that seeing someone win $5,000 coupled with our new 'Join the Winners' campaign will encourage even more suggestions to come up with creative ideas to help the state conserve its precious fiscal resources."

Preparations in swing for sportsmen's day

Preparations for the Department of Conservation's special National Hunting and Fishing Day observance Sept. 24 and 25 are moving ahead, according to Bob Winchester, chairman. Taxidermists, sportsmen's clubs, wildlife artists, collectors, carvers and others who wish to participate will need to act soon, he said.

Hunting, fishing and other outdoor activities are scheduled at five sites: Conservation World at Springfield, (217) 782-7454; Johnson Sank State Park, (815) 853-5589; Henry County; Silver Springs State Fish and Wildlife Area, (312) 553-6297; Kendall County; Kennecuk Cove County Park, (217) 42-4016; Vermillion County; and Wayne Fitzgerald State Park, 279-3110, Franklin County.

Activities at various sites will include demonstrations of black powder equipment and shooting, boating and firearm safety instruction, film presentations, trap shooting, archery displays and contests, rod construction, fly-tying, casting clinics and other displays related to outdoor recreation.

Free booklet available on cemetery care

"Stones and Statues," a free 20-page booklet by the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency, examines laws governing the management of public graveyards and offers guidelines on preservation, protection and maintenance of cemeteries.

"Caring for Your Local Cemetery," another Illinois Cemetery Project publication, addresses a "hands-on" approach to the improvement, restoration and maintenance of local cemeteries. It is available for $1.

Copies of either brochure may be obtained by writing the Illinois Cemetery Project, Illinois Historic Preservation Agency, Old State Capitol, Springfield 62701.

'The Lincoln Legals' director appointed

Dr. Cullom Davis, nationally known scholar and member of the history department of Sangamon State University, has been appointed project director for the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency's "Lincoln Legals" project.

The project will be a major analysis of Abraham Lincoln's entire legal career.

Durbin running strongly

By Edward T. Hearn
P-RJ Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Rep. Richard Durbin, the Springfield Democrat, has $163,000 available to spend on his re-election, holding a huge financial edge over Republican opponent Paul Jurgens, according to new campaign disclosures.

Durbin, 20th District representative since 1983, has raised $82,000 since the first of the year and all but $3,900 has come from political action committees, according to Durbin filing with the Federal Election Commission covering April, May and June.

Jurgens, a Decatur oral surgeon and an underdog in the predominantly Democratic district, has raised $29,300 this year and reported having $15,300 left to spend. PACs have given the 66-year-old Republican just $100, according to Jurgens' FEC filing for the same period.

"What we have learned is that PACs don't contribute much to challengers, but to incumbents," said Jurgens campaign manager James Patrick. "It's been a long shot from the beginning, no doubt about it. We don't expect to match Durbin dollar for dollar."

All House candidates who raise or spend more than $5,000 were required to file quarterly campaign disclosures with the FEC, reporting all donations, loans and debts.

Jurgens is trying to unseat Durbin after three terms. In 1989, 88 percent of House incumbents gained re-election.

Durbin gained national notice earlier this year by sponsoring the law that banned smoking on all domestic flights of two hours or less. Although unpopular with the tobacco lobby, the smoking ban proved popular with many airlines and their employees.

The pro-smoking-ban forces have rewarded Durbin's effort by helping fund his re-election. One of Durbin's largest contributors between April and June was the Air Line Pilots Association PAC, which gave him $2,500.

During the 1985-86 election cycle, Durbin took in $343,595 from all contributors and $175,727 of that total came from PACs, according to the Almanac of American Politics. More than a third of Durbin's 4,686 campaign PAC money came from pro-labor organizations, and those groups have continued to support him in 1988.

Among the top donors to Durbin's 1988 re-election were the National Association of Retired Federal Employees PAC ($4,000), Carpenters Legislative Improvement Committee ($1,000) and Engineers Political Education Committee ($1,000).

Poshard holds financial edge in 22nd

By Edward T. Hearn
P-RJ Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Democratic congressional candidate Glendon Poshard continues to hold a dominant financial position over Republican rival Patrick Kelley, according to new financial disclosures by the Illinois 22nd District candidates.

Poshard, a state senator from Carterville, has raised $182,000 this year and has $104,000 left in his campaign war chest. Kelley, a Carbondale resident and Southern Illinois University law professor, has collected just $30,500 and has $4,800 left, according to the Federal Election Commission disclosures.

"I don't think (Poshard's) a cash magnet by any stretch. He's just immensely popular. Plus you have a district that's been Democratic for 34 years (Rep. Ken Gray 20 years, followed by Rep. Paul Simon 10 years), followed by the retiring Rep. Gray for the past four years," Poshard campaign manager Jim Wilson said.

Both candidates are required to file quarterly campaign disclosures with the FEC, reporting donations, loans and debts. Poshard and Kelley are vying to succeed Gray, a West Frankfort Democrat.

The 22nd District includes 20 southern Illinois counties, among them Monroe County and a section of St. Clair County, including the Cahokia area.

A Republican campaign strategist said Kelley would have trouble winning Nov. 8 if his fund raising does not pick up.

"Clearly, he is going to have to raise more money. I expect his funding to improve. If we are outspent at the margin it's at now, it will be difficult," said Tim Meyer, a Midwest specialist with the National Republican Congressional Committee.

During a three-month period ending July 15, Poshard took in about $65,000 and spent $55,900. The Poshard for Congress Committee reported $30,550 in debts for services provided by consultants and campaign staff, according to FEC records.

Over the same period, Kelley reported raising $17,100 and spending $13,500. The Pat Kelley for Congress Committee listed $5,400 in debts, mostly payments owed for office equipment and political consultant services, the records state.

Poshard's support remains solid with local backers and labor groups. During the April-June quarter, individual donors gave Poshard $34,600 and political action committees gave $28,150.

The PACs that gave the most money to Poshard include the Machinists Non-Partisan Political League ($5,000), the Sheet Metal Workers International Association ($2,500) and the Air Line Pilots Association ($2,500).

Under federal election laws, individuals may give a candidate up to $1,000 per election, while PACs may give up to $5,000. In the 1985-86 election cycle, the Machinists Non-Partisan Political League gave $1.3 million to Democrats and $90,000 to Republicans, according to the Almanac of Federal PACs.

During the same 1988 quarter, Kelley got $14,000 from local supporters and $2,000 from PACs, including $1,000 from the campaign committee of House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, the Peoria Republican.

The Monroe County Republican Central Committee also gave $200 to the Kelley campaign.

Anti-drug grants offered by Met Life

The Metropolitan Life Foundation is offering grants to nonprofit organizations that sponsor substance abuse prevention programs.

For the third year, Metropolitan's Great Lakes Territory headquartered in Aurora is awards in conjunction with the company's Community Alcohol and Substance Abuse Program. The Foundation has awarded over $3.1 million since 1983 to organizations taking an active role in educating community members about the dangers and problems arising from substance abuse.

"The most effective way to deal with the substance abuse problem affecting our country's young people is education," said Charles Kavitsky, vice president of Metropolitan Life, in announcing this year's grant program.

"Metropolitan's efforts concentrate on helping those organizations that are educating our youth about the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse."

He said the goal of the Metropolitan program is to get the message to young people that it is all right to turn down an offer of drugs or alcohol, "say no," so they may achieve healthier, more productive and more fulfilling lives.

Grants of up to $1,000 will be awarded to each organization selected from those submitting proposals.

The group must be a nonprofit community organization that has an IRS status of 501(c)(3). A request for a grant must include a copy of the organization's exempt letter indicating this tax status, a detailed description of the group's program, past accomplishments and goals and a copy of its current budget. Organizations representing elementary or secondary schools must be proposed by a nonprofit community organization.

Deadline for all grant proposals is Sept. 19. Decisions will be made and grants issued later this year. The Great Lakes grant program is restricted to seven Midwestern states which comprise Metropolitan's Great Lakes Territory — Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

To apply for a Metropolitan Alcohol and Substance Abuse Prevention Grant, a group may mail its proposal to Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., Substance Abuse Prevention, P.O. Box 2500, Aurora, Ill. 60007.

House needs watering, study says

CHAMPAIGN 20 You should water your foundation as well as your flowers during an extended drought.

"According to research performed by the University of Illinois Small Homes Council-Building Research Council and the Illinois State Geological Survey (ISGS), cracks in basement walls often appear at the end of a drought period."

"To protect basement walls against damage, the soil around the house should be shaded, mulched, or covered, and watered if local water conservation policies permit."

"As soil containing clay dries, it shrinks away from the foundation, often leaving a crevice up to one-half inch wide and two or more feet deep around the house. This crevice does not cause problems as long as it remains open. However, dirt and debris usually fall into the crevice."

"When the rains resume, the soil will swell back to its original size, and anything that has fallen into the slot will be forced against the foundation by the expanding soil."

"Debris between the foundation and soil increases the pressure against the walls and may cause them to bulge inward, particularly true of unreinforced brick and concrete block walls."

"A common form of damage is horizontal racking at a mortar joint on the inside basement wall just below the soil level on the outside. A small crack is not a matter of concern. However, if the bulge is more than two inches in on an eight-inch-thick wall, repairs should be considered."

In extreme cases, and after repeated wet/dry cycles, the accumulated movements can cause the walls to collapse.

Scientists at the ISGS have instrumented two foundations in an attempt to measure the amount of movement and pressures that may occur when moisture returns to the soils following the drought. The ISGS is a division of the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

'Little Shop of Horrors' at SIUE

The award-winning musical "Little Shop of Horrors," based on a science-fiction movie about a bloodthirsty plant in a skid row florist shop, will be performed at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

"The vegetable will 'arrive' at SIUE when C. Otis Sweezy completes its design and helps construct it," Sweezy, a professor of theater and director of design and technical theater for the department of theater and dance, will create the puppets to be used for the production.

Performances will be at 8:15 p.m. Aug. 5, 6, 11, 12 and 13, and at 7 p.m. Aug. 7 and 14 in the Communications Building theater on the SIUE campus. Tickets will be general admission, $6.50; seniors, $5.50; SIUE faculty, staff, students and alumni, $5; children under 12 years of age, $3.50.

The plot involves a "nebbish" of a floral clerk who discovers a mysterious plant that will only grow if provided human blood. The plot escalates into a blood-bath of corrupting power and love.

The central part of this production is actually an array of puppets depicting the plant in various stages, from a small pod in a bucket to a giant man-eating growth that gulps human blood and body parts, and sings rock songs.

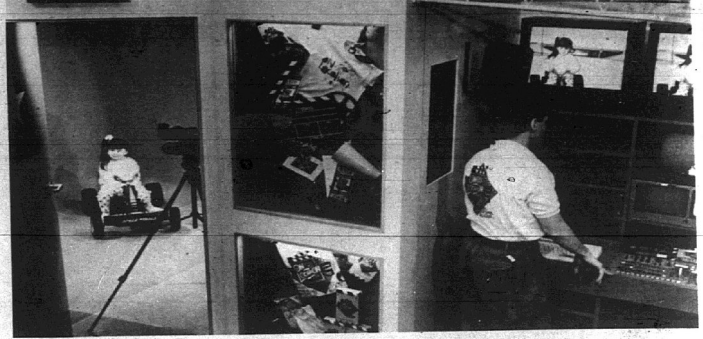

Sweezy will use various materials to create the illusion of a feisty plant. "I'll be using foam rubber over a metal support structure for the final puppet used on stage," Sweezy said. "In addition, I'll utilize spray urethane foam and red and-green tufts of crinoline for the inside of the mouth."

"I'm trying to give it some human qualities with teeth and a tongue that might lick its lips after eating," he said, "but I'm trying to get away from what we've all seen in the movie. It will be similar, but I won't conform to that same design. It will be exotic and different like many carnivorous plants which have unique colorations to attract insects."

The designer said he visited the Missouri Botanical Gardens and purchased a Venus Flytrap to study a carnivorous plant. He also researched such plants through various publications.

He also pointed out that everything he had read about other productions or what he'd heard from colleagues in the theater business pointed to an expensive undertaking. "Everyone said we couldn't build these puppets for less than $3,000, but I've estimated we'll do it for about $1,200."

ON LOCATION, a new company that uses high-tech equipment to bring fantasies to fruition, places the subject into a room, left, and then superimposes the subject's image on one of several available action sequences.

Video company creates fantasy for $19

By Richard Zacks
New York Times Syndicate

Pick your favorite daydream. You want to dance on the moon with astronauts? You want to put on a Supergirl cape and fly over New York penthouses? You want to bat in the bottom of the ninth inning in the seventh game of the World Series and lash a home run to win the game?

A brand-new video studio can make any of those fantasies come true in less than five minutes. On Location, which debuted last month on the fifth floor of Macy's Herald Square store in New York, uses the latest high-tech equipment to create elaborate instant videos.

That's right; they superimpose you onto wild adventures. Basically, you hand them $18.95 to feel like star.

You can choose from 25 different backgrounds (from cowboys to ballerinas), 150 different songs ("Pink Cadillac" to "Old MacDonald's Farm" to "Walk Like an Egyptian") and 180 special effects. Your tape is ready the instant you finish acting. Copies for grandma are available for $6.95 each.

Performers can use them as low-budget demo reels. "We'll probably do one with the magic-castle backdrop," says Holly Hemlock of the Das Perlines, an all-female pop band, which uses video to audition for out-of-town club dates.

It doesn't stop there: Four employees in Macy's legal department created their own music video. "That's What Kids Are For" to show at a colleague's baby shower.

"Everybody has a little part of them that wants to be a star," says Rebecca Karples, the 22-year-old assistant manager who enthusiastically coaches these amateurs. "This lets them do it."

The company has achieved such stunning early results that it plans to roll out On Location video studios to 46 locations in department stores and shopping malls from Boston to San Francisco in time for Christmas.

One recent day the traffic to the hole-in-the-wall studio, snuggled between ladies' shoes and children's dresses, was packed with "would-be stars." Brian Griffin, a 19-year-old security guard, brought in a tape of him singing the club tune, "Let's Get Busy," and created a music video, sashaying in front of backdrops of the Brooklyn Bridge, Circle Line boat, Statue of Liberty, Chinatown and Wall Street.

Steve Wenger, a 28-year-old salesman from Palm Springs, Calif., put on his Yankee cap to star in the World Series video.

His friend Charlotte Leslie, a set designer from Bayville, N.Y., opted to do a Supremes tune while free-floating in outer space and dancing on the moon.

How does it all work? Think of those television weathermen who stand in front of a computerized map. They actually are aiming their stick at a black wall while looking at a television monitor that shows them pointing to a map.

Well, it's the same idea with these roll-your-own videos. You stand in front of a solid green wall in a tiny studio with a camera recording you. On a 13-inch television set you can see exactly how you look superimposed on the prerecorded tape. When Wenger did his baseball video, he was swinging a bat in an empty room but could see himself at home plate in front of a screaming crowd of 50,000. Leslie was dancing on the moon.

Angel Garcia, the 25-year-old tech operator, explains that the equipment is programmed to wash out all the green. The image of the "star" is then inserted onto one of the 25 pre-fab videos. Garcia can use the Fairlight Computer video system to add all kinds of special effects.

Rick Goldberg, a 30-year-old who founded the On Location concept. His company (5075 Westheimer, Suite 900, Houston, Texas, 77056), which pioneered the create-your-own demo singing tapes, expects to top $3 million in sales this year.

"Plenty of parents will want to capture their kids' wonder years with more than just a photograph," says Goldberg, who is planning to add new fantasy scenarios every month. Upcoming are the figure-skating finals of the Olympics, a Super Bowl sequence and a cops-and-robbers chase.

His idea sure looks like a winner. Remember those cheesy little photo booths in the dime store? Drop in a few quarters and be rewarded with mug shots perfect for a lifer at San Quentin.

87th Infantry planning reunion

The 87th (Golden Acorn) Infantry Division of World Wars I and II will hold its 39th annual reunion at the Omni International Hotel, Baltimore, Md., Sept. 28 to Oct. 2.

Former members of the 87th Division are invited to attend the reunion and may obtain additional information about reservations and activities by writing: Gladwin Pascuzzo, 2374 N. Dundee Court, Highland, Mich. 48031 or calling 313-887-9005.

The 87th was activated and trained as a combat infantry division in both world wars. In 1917, the division joined Gen. John Pershing's American Expeditionary Force in France, as it was being assigned to the Western front, the Armistice was signed.

In World War II, the division went into action at Metz, France, and during 154 days of almost continual combat, the "Golden Acorn" fought in France, Belgium, Luxembourg and Germany.

It advanced more than 345 miles in the European Theater, taking 63,338 prisoners and liberating hundreds of towns, Pascauzzo said.

Veterans of the famous "Battle of the Bulge," crossing of the Moselle and Rhine rivers and the "lightning streak" in pursuit of the Nazis across the heart of Germany, the 87th fought many bitter battles.

Paddlers guns for swimming title

With perhaps a little pride to regain, the Paddlers swimming team will march into the Gaslight Bath & Tennis Club in Collinsville on Saturday.

The Southwestern Illinois Swimming Association championships will begin at 8 a.m. It's the last meet of the summer season, and Paddlers is trying to gain a little redemption. They don't lose often, but the diving team was edged out by two points (52-50) by Summersport of Godfrey in the SWISA diving championships last Saturday.

The diving team had a couple of close meets at the end of the regular season, so the second-place finish wasn't a total surprise. But the swimming team's closest meet was a 378-276 win over Summerhaven in the opener.

In six meets this summer, the average margin of victory for Paddlers — which has won 10 of the past 11 SWISA meets — was 415-236.

Each team enters its top two swimmers in each event in the preliminaries. The finals will begin by the early afternoon with the top six from the preliminaries competing for team points and individual awards.

Qualifiers from Paddlers include:

8 & under boys: Andrew Dresch, Jim Dunn, Paul Yehling, Matt Yehling, Adam Tanase and Pete Werth (alternate).

8 & under girls: Tonna Druhe, Emilee Rollins, Roxanne Simpson, Rebecca Talley, Amanda Nizinski (alternate) and Suzie Baker (alternate).

9-10 boys: Cole Becker, Steve Geske, Jay Simpson, Zack Suhre, Chris Valencia and Matt Tanase.

9-10 girls: Melanie Embick, Beth Goclan, Amy Kraus, Denise McMillan, Karen Yehling and Joselyn Simpson.

11-12 boys: Pat Curry, Adam Jenness, Jason Talley, Dan Peterson, Mike Worthen (alternate) and John Polivick (alternate).

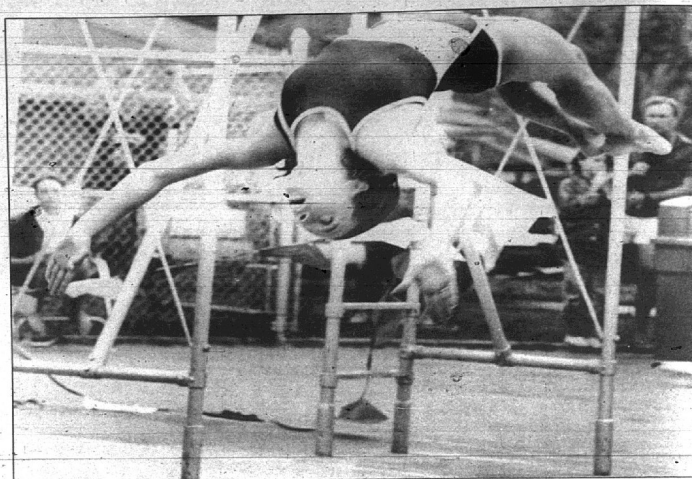

11-12 girls: Brooke Bjorkman, Holly Farnsworth, Gina Hankins, Jeanine McMillan and Adrienne Yates.

13-14 boys: Larry Curry, Brent Golden, Chris McMillan, Corey Reed and Matt Yates.

13-14 girls: Anne Amisch, Jenny Baker, Julie Goclan, Vanessa Westbrook, Lynn Yehling, Cheryl Forbes (alternate) and Kristie Jenness (alternate).

15-18 boys: Dan Niles, Joe Martinez, Collins Harlan, Vince Darnell, Mike Worthen and Matt Foret (alternate).

15-18 girls: Kelly Reed, Tonya Geske, Janet Niles, Patti Martin, Jen Trtanj (alternate) and Cara Embick (alternate).

BROOKE BJORKMAN makes a dive during the SWISA championships in Godfrey last weekend. She took third in the 11-12 girls age group. Bjorkman will also be competing for Paddlers in the SWISA swimming championships in Collinsville this Saturday.

Best of Missouri hands

The term "hand-made" is reserved for items that have been carefully and lovingly crafted by the skilled hands of an artist or artisan. Although they may outwardly resemble another product, these items are truly "one of a kind," bearing the marks of the hands that brought them into being.

The University of Missouri, University Extension and Lincoln University have realized the importance of connecting the people across the nation who are interested in Missouri arts and crafts with the artists themselves.

For this reason, they have created a catalog called "The Best of Missouri's Hands." Compiling such a catalog is a process that involves many hours of viewing slides, photographs and hand-crafted items by experts in the field. The result is a publication displaying what they believe to be the "best of the best" in our state's crafts industry.

The catalog has been published in two volumes, featuring over 700 juried items by Missouri artists and artisans. For information on purchasing either (or both) of the volumes, write to: Best of Missouri's Hands, 628 Clark Hall, Drawer 99, University of Missouri, Columbia, MO 65211.

Missouri Hunting and Fishing Permits

Hunting and fishing in Missouri is a good buy. For residents, it's a real bargain; for visitors, it's still very economical. In fact, some sportsmen can hunt or fish without even buying a permit due to age, physical handicap, land-owner status or other circumstances.

The Missouri Department of Conservation has all the details. Please contact the department at Missouri Department of Conservation, P.O. Box 180, Dept. SJ-88, Jefferson City, Mo. 65102 and request a free copy of "Wildlife Code of Missouri" for information on permits, costs and seasons. Permit costs for some of the most popular activities include:

Wineries

Missouri wine country changing

By JAMES G. ASHBY
Managing Consultant

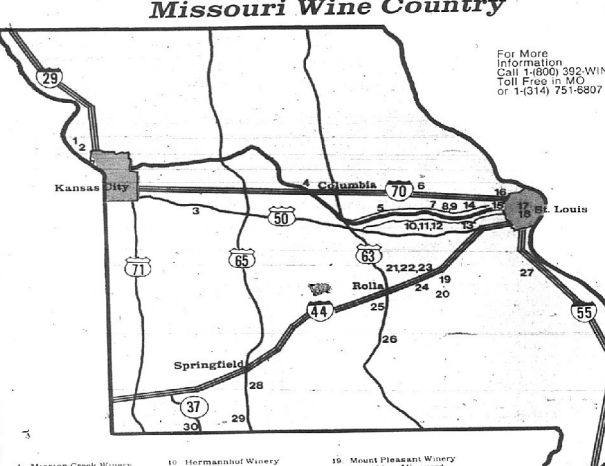

Missouri grape & wine program. Missouri wineries have undergone some real changes in the past 20 years. A late variety of French-American hybrid grapes have changed the taste and style of the wines. New winemakers, sons and daughters of the brave souls who started the business when wine wasn't cool, are now coming home from the world's finest wine schools and urging Mom and Dad to make big investments in new vineyards and equipment. Wineries that were producing only Concord and Catawba just a few years ago are now using state-of-the-art equipment and turning out Seyval and Vidal Blanc that would delight the most critical Chardonnay drinker.

However, there is one ingredient common to Missouri wine country that hasn't changed. It seems to be indigenous to our area and I am afraid some of the other great wine regions have lost it. I am trying to describe a feeling... an atmosphere... if I had to put it in a single word, it would be FUN. Touring Missouri wine country is interesting, educational and most of all, great fun!

After touring the great wine regions of Napa and Sonoma, I returned with increased knowledge about winemaking technology and a new appreciation for some excellent wines. The tours were interesting, although I wonder how long the guides had to wear head gear in order to train their noses to stay so high.

And the descriptions... PLEASE! I mean it's really nice to find a wine that is... but not too aggressive, demonstrating elegance, finesse and charm, but we really wouldn't want one that's "tired on the palate, lacking direction and a bit awkward." There's nothing worse than a wine that doesn't know where it's going. This is all just a tad bit snooty for this old Missourian.

Just what is it that makes Missouri wineries so much fun? Historic towns, breathtaking scenery, and country charm help soothe the soul, but it's more than that. It's got to be the people. REAL people. People who love their way of life and enjoy talking and laughing about it. They take their winemaking seriously, but they know how to separate work from play. Har- from generation to generation all the way back to the world. The European nations didn't create these celebrations in order to increase tourism. In order to thank the workers for all of the hard work and to celebrate the fact that it was over. Kind of a TGIF attitude. The same thing happens here. Most wineries pull out all the stops and really celebrate, and the more the merrier.

Ozark Mountain Country

Silver Dollar City books festivals to end summer

Theme parks so often "get sleepy" the last 10 days of August and stay that way all the rest of the season. But not at Silver Dollar City, where two separate festivals come roaring into town.

The National Quilt Festival, incorporating Silver Dollar City's sixth annual quilt show and sale, opens Friday, Aug. 26, and continues through Sunday, Sept. 11 (closed only on Sept. 8).

For the 27th year, the National Crafts Festival, foremost exposition of its kind in the nation, will attract a huge following of folks who want to see well over 100 crafts in action—Friday, Sept. 16 through Oct. 30 (closed Tuesday of each week).

Silver Dollar City always maintains its regular prices during festivals. And all of the usual fun, from Main Street mayhem to the Wilderness Water Boggan, is to be going full tilt.

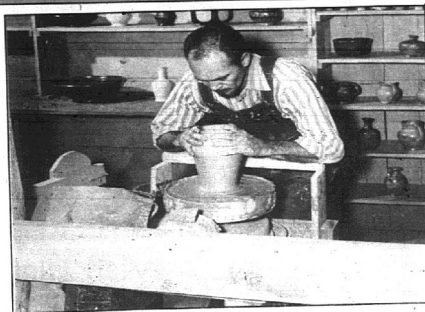

The flavor of the tropics is added to the Quilt Festival this year in the special appearance of Hawaiian quilters and their historic needlework.

At this year's National Crafts Festival a headline event is a nationwide Doll Show and Competition, coproduced by Doll Reader magazine. It's the first such event to offer cash prizes for doll making, with the "best-of-show" entry being awarded $2,000.

Of the traditionally popular demonstrated crafts, all the favorites will be back.

The National Wood Carvers Assn. returns for its second National Crafts Festival, presenting a Wood Carvers Showcase: fourteen different categories of carvings are eligible for awards.

Information on Ozark Mountain Country's star attraction is obtainable by writing Aunt June, Silver Dollar City, Branson, Mo. 65616.

The National Crafts Festival at Silver Dollar City is billed as the nation's largest "action" exposition of rare and historic handicrafts. The Festival takes place from Sept. 16 through Oct. 30.

Fantastic Caverns is a major Springfield attraction.

Bass Pro Shops sets fall Hunting Classic

It all starts September 22! It's the first day of the Fall season, and opening day at the most exciting hunting show of the year—Bass Pro Shop's Fall Hunting Classic.

Last October, more than 70,000 hunters and shooters from every corner of the country traveled to the Bass Pro Shops Outdoor World showroom in Springfield, Mo., to be a part of the first ever Fall Hunting Classic that featured bargain prices, demonstrations by experts and exhibits of world record trophy mounts.

Already, more than 150 major manufacturers, leading outdoor artists and noted conservation organizations have reserved space to exhibit for the four-day 1988 Fall Hunting Classic.

This year, visiting hunters will enjoy an even greater opportunity to see exceptional trophy class big game mounts. In addition to presenting seminars on "The Art of Patterning Deer," and "Calling and Rattling," world renowned whitetail expert Dick Iddell will exhibit his magnificent collection of record class whitetail mounts.

Bass Pro Shops will also display a huge collection of World Class trophy mounts, many of which once graced the original Herter's showroom.

Highlighting this year's show is a great schedule of hunting seminars. Distinguished authorities, such as Ben Rogers Lee, Noel Feather, Roger Wyant, and astronaut Joe Engle will share a wealth of hunting and shooting knowledge with the audience. Visitors will have the chance to meet celebrities who also share a love of hunting, including professional athletes like Jackie Youngblood, Lynn Dickey, and Bert Jones.

Outdoor archery and airgun ranges will provide shooters a "hands on" opportunity to try out today's leading bow and airgun models, with experienced factory representatives.

For the black powder hunter, there will also be several muzzle-loading demonstrations.

A single $5 passbook gets the hunter or shooter into the Fall Hunting Classic all four days. If tickets are ordered prior to Sept. 1, after that date, admission is $5 per day.

Bass Pro Shops has offered to donate half of all gate proceeds to valuable wildlife and habitat conservation programs. (Visitors 7 and under, or 65 and older admitted free.) This year's show encompasses National Hunting & Fishing Day on Saturday, September 24. The huge crowd expected at Bass Pro Shops' sprawling Outdoor World complex in Springfield could be the largest outdoor sports event special day for sportsmen in the country. So plan now to join in the fun. Don't miss the 1988 Fall Hunting Classic. The dates, Sept. 22, 23, 24 and 25.

Springfield—Gateway to Ozarks

By the end of the century, Springfield, Missouri is expected to be the exact center of the population of the United States. It is also the third largest city in Missouri and has attractions which make it a popular tourist destination.

Known as the Gateway to Ozark Mountain Country, Springfield is the traveler's home base to all area lakes and attractions. Many of these attractions are sites which cannot easily be seen in other cities.

Exotic Animal Paradise in Springfield is America's largest drive through animal park. Visitors travel through a 400 acre, 9 mile park featuring over 3,000 exotic animals and rare birds from around the world.

If this animal kingdom isn't enough, there is also Dickerson Park Zoo. The Zoo is committed to the preservation of rare and wild animals and is nationally known for its elephant herd.

Springfield prides itself not only in its wildlife but also on its parks. There are more than 1,206 acres in its 41 parks, a 64,000 acre national forest and there is also the Minney Wildlife Refuge nearby.

For the adventurous, Fantastic Caverns, located in Springfield, is the only cave known to be large enough to drive through. Visitors can view unusual rock formations in 45 minutes from the comfort of a jeep drawn train.

Springfield also has famous historic sites which offer visitors a look into the past. Wilson's Creek National Battlefield is the Civil War battlefield where Union and Confederate troops battled to determine Missouri's fate and the Historic Bentley House is the home of the Museum of the Ozarks.

Antique lovers will find the Old Time Antique Mall and Flea Market an antique paradise. The nearby Galloway Village also offers several shops with crafts and antiques.

Shopping for more modern items is made easy in Springfield. Shoppers will delight in Battlement Mall, one of Missouri's largest with more than 150 shops and five full line department stores. Springfield is also home of the Bass Pro Shop's Outdoor World International Headquarters, the world's largest sporting goods store.

For comfort and pleasure, visitors will find more than 350 restaurants in Springfield and more than 4,000 rooms in a wide variety available.

Whether it be for its beauty alone, its attractions or celebrations, such as The Ozark Empire Fair—Missouri's second largest fair or Wild West Days—1885 "Shoot Out" in the town square—a visit to Springfield is a must.

Branson's Country Shows, Silver Dollar City and Table Rock Lake are also within 40 miles. For more information on accommodations and attractions, call toll-free (800) 678-8766.
